TABOO

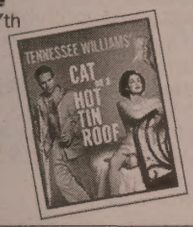

Broadway Matinee
Sun., Jan. 11th

STARRING BOY GEORGE

Taboo is a musical portrait of a remarkable era—London in the 80s. A time that youths rebelliously found their expression in flamboyant fashion and decadent nightlife. Taboo focuses on Leigh Bowery, and George O'Dowd, who arrive in London and become the surprising crossover star of the scene as Boy George. Both mens' stories are played out against the fantastic background of Taboo, the night club that had come to symbolize the mad excess & decadent fun of 80's. Package includes ticket, lunch at East River Café & transportation.

"CAT ON A HOT TIN ROOF"

Broadway Matinee
Weds., Jan. 7th
$140 pp.

William's 1955 drama concerns a dying patriarch, Big Daddy, who is trying to decide whether to leave his huge plantation to his weaselly son Gooper or his brooding son, Brick. Big Daddy prefers Brick, but Brick has some dark secret that is causing him to ignore his hot-blooded wife, Maggie. Can Maggie induce Brick to snap out of his funk and father a child (and heir)? Starring Ashley Judd, Jason Patric and Ned Beatty as Big Daddy. Package includes orchestra seat ticket, lunch at the U.N. Delegate's Dining Room and round-trip transportation.

The Down Factory Store

Thanksgiving Extravaganza

Thanks to our retail and "online" customers we are one of the largest resources for goose down comforters, pillows and featherbeds. Consumers that compare our quality and prices to those of department stores, discounters, catalogs and other web sites find that we are indeed unbeatable - and we guarantee that! Know the facts of down before you buy.

FACT: Down comes from the chest of the bird to keep it insulated from the weather. Feathers (those things with quills) come from the back of the bird to keep it dry. Down can cost as much as $10.00 an ounce, feathers 10¢ an ounce. Over 90% of down manufacturers find it to their advantage to add over 30% feathers to their down. It's like buying three pounds of ground sirloin and getting two pounds of meat and one pound of fat. You have paid for meat and got fat, it's the same with their down, they both do it because it's legal. We do not contaminate our down by adding feathers to it.

KNOW THE FACTS BEFORE YOU BUY IT

FACT: Fill power, this is the amount the cubic inches filled by one ounce of down. Higher fill power means a higher quality down. You will find that as the quality of the down increases, so does the comfort & life of the item.

FACT: We use only high thread count, baffle box construction, 100% cotton covers on our down comforters & pillows. Down insulates by trapping air and holding in your body temperature, keeping you comfortable through the night. Low quality comforters are usually heavier because it takes more of an inferior down to fill a comforter. Inferior down becomes clumpy and it can't breath, resulting in your becoming over heated and uncomfortable. Our high quality down gives you the warmth and comfort without the weight.

FACT: In all likelihood you will have your comforter longer than the car you are now driving.

"We go the distance for you."

The Village That Isn't There

The Amazing Story Of The East End Village That Was Bulldozed Down

By Dan Rattiner

The picture that accompanies this article shows the village of Montauk as it appeared in 1912. If you are looking for something familiar in this picture, there isn't anything. From 1890 until 1940 the Montauk Fishing Village was on the arc of Fort Pond Bay facing north. In 1940, it was bulldozed to the ground by the U. S. Navy. Today, there is another Montauk Village three miles from this location, and the main street runs through the center of town, three blocks from the Atlantic Ocean.

What happened to the old Village of Montauk and why it was bulldozed to the ground is one of the great legends of the East End. The village was destroyed in spite of great protests from the residents who were forced to evacuate the place on a few days' notice. Leveled were about forty private residences, a general store, a restaurant and fishing station, and the post office. One building that was saved was the Montauk School, which was moved by the Navy about two hundred yards to the south, and is now a private residence. It is on Industrial Road just to the west of where the railroad tracks cross that road. Today, there are a few residents on the East End who went to that school when it was in the village on the bay. Perry B. Duryea Jr., the former Speaker of the State Assembly who still lives in Montauk, is one of them.

The founding of the Village of Montauk was a result of a daring plan by a Pennsylvania railroad tycoon named Austin Corbin. In the 1870s, a series of small private railroads on Long Island consolidated into one middle-size railroad called the Long Island Rail Road. Out east, the tracks extended as far as Southampton. Beyond Southampton, people took the stagecoach.

In 1881, Corbin bought the Long Island Rail Road and extended the tracks to the arc of Fort Pond Bay in Montauk. He also began construction on the Pennsylvania Railroad Station in Manhattan. Apparently, he intended to link up his holdings in Pennsylvania and New Jersey to Long Island. It seemed logical enough to the residents of New York City. At Montauk, however, he did not just build a track or two to a dead end. He built a whole array of tracks — they are still there today — plus various docks and warehouses along the Bay. It is a deep water bay. Ships from Europe could come in to offload their goods.

In the middle of this construction, it suddenly dawned on the city fathers in New York what this was all about. Freighters coming into New York City from Europe traveled at about 12 knots. Because the narrows at Verrazano were shallow, ship captains approaching the city had to wait for high tide. Thus from the time a freighter sighted the Montauk Lighthouse until it found a spot at a pier in Manhattan could take, sometimes, 24 hours.

In the middle of this construction, it suddenly dawned on the city fathers in New York what this was all about.

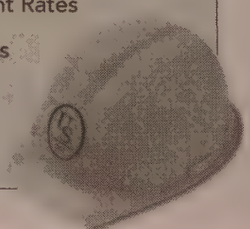

Corbin's plan was to take all the business away from the Port of New York and have it happen in Montauk. Fort Pond Bay was deep enough to accommodate freighters. His trains, loaded with cargo, would zip into New York at 55 miles an hour and then, underground, go right through it and down to Philadelphia and out into the rest of the countryside, without even slowing down. The savings in time would be Amagansett's Alec Baldwin hosted Saturday Night Live for the 11th time last Saturday, starring in 8 hilarious skits. Mr. Baldwin's Cat in the Hat co-star, Mike Myers, joined him during the opening monologue. In addition, Mr. Baldwin announced that the first film he directed, The Devil and Daniel Webster, will unfortunately not be released since it has been seized by federal agents as evidence in an ongoing investigation into the film's investors.

He raised the money running in the recent New York Marathon. P Diddy will run again next year for charity for the right price, $10 million, should that be offered from private sources. Now that he's not in training, the entertainment mogul is free to resume his night life and he was in attendance at the Victoria's Secret Fashion show on Thursday. He also purchased another mansion, this time in Atlanta's Dunwoody section, for $2.6 million. Seven bedrooms, eleven baths, screening theater, wine cellar, pool and tennis all down the road from his Justin's Restaurant.

East Hampton's Renee Zellweger, Nicole Kidman and Jude Law star in Cold Mountain, directed by Anthony Minghella, who directed The English Patient and The Talented Mr. Ripley. The screenplay is based on a novel by Charles Frazier and relates the Civil War tale of a wounded Confederate soldier, his love interest (Ms. Kidman), and a drifter, Ruby (Ms. Zellweger), who struggles to help save the family farm. The film will be released December 25 by Miramax, and there's already talk of another Academy Award nomination for Ms. Zellweger.

Actually, she looks great – especially to anyone who has ever needed intensive care. That's because Hong Tan, like many of the nurses at Stony Brook, is among the most highly trained and experienced nurses in the country. In fact, Stony Brook is one of the few hospitals in New York to have a closed medical ICU, operated and staffed exclusively with critical care specialists.

You'll find this same commitment to providing the highest level of care throughout the hospital, where our patients benefit from nurses who understand the latest technology and are experienced with the most up-to-date treatments and procedures. And when you're facing a health problem, that experience is not only reassuring, it means your chances for a full recovery look a whole lot better.

Had Corbin's plan gone through, there never would have been a Montauk Fishing Village on Fort Pond Bay. It would have been the City of Montauk, an industrial port of several hundred thousand people, with ocean liners and freighters lined up in the bay, at perhaps forty or fifty piers.

Corbin failed not because his plan was a poor one. It failed because once aroused, the authorities in the City of New York fought tooth and nail against him, putting one legal roadblock after another in his way. In the middle of this, Austin Corbin died, thrown from a buckboard when his horses stampeded into a wood in Pennsylvania. Corbin's dream died with him.

In Montauk, however, all of what Corbin built remained, including the docks and the station and all the railroad tracks. The holdings were so vast that the tracks from Manhattan weren't even along the water at Fort Pond Bay. Although the railroad owned that land, the tracks were several hundred yards inland, the thought being that there would have to be all sorts of warehouses built to accommodate the cargo between the docks and the tracks. Spurs from the main line of the railroad extended at ninety degrees from the main track and dead-ended out on the docks.

Five years later, in the summer of 1898, the American Army, in its first foray overseas, was encamped in the mountains overlooking Santiago, Cuba, just finishing up their victory in the Spanish-American war. Down below them, in Santiago, their generals were working on surrender terms with the Spanish dictators of that island. The negotiations dragged on and on, and many of the American soldiers in the mountains fell ill, coming down with malaria or diphtheria or yellow fever. Yet they had been victorious, and in towns and villages all across America, the townspeople waited for their heroes to come home to ticker tape parades and various other patriotic celebrations.

But then, President William McKinley was warned by his staff that bringing the 32,000 man American army straight to their homes from Cuba was inviting a national epidemic. They recommended that the army be brought home as a whole, and remain in one place "on maneuvers" somewhere in a remote part of the United States until they either recovered or died of their illnesses. The ideal spot for this, they told McKinley, would be Montauk, Long Island, a place almost completely devoid of human habitation but with an extensive railroad and shipping port from the recently attempted takeover of the Port of New York.

The soldiers came to Montauk aboard troop ships, arriving at the docks of the Long Island Rail Road on Fort Pond Bay. They set up their tents and were here a month. President McKinley visited them, and the following year asked Teddy Roosevelt, the young lieutenant he had met in Montauk who had organized the Roughriders, to run as his Vice President. Thus started Teddy Roosevelt's political career.

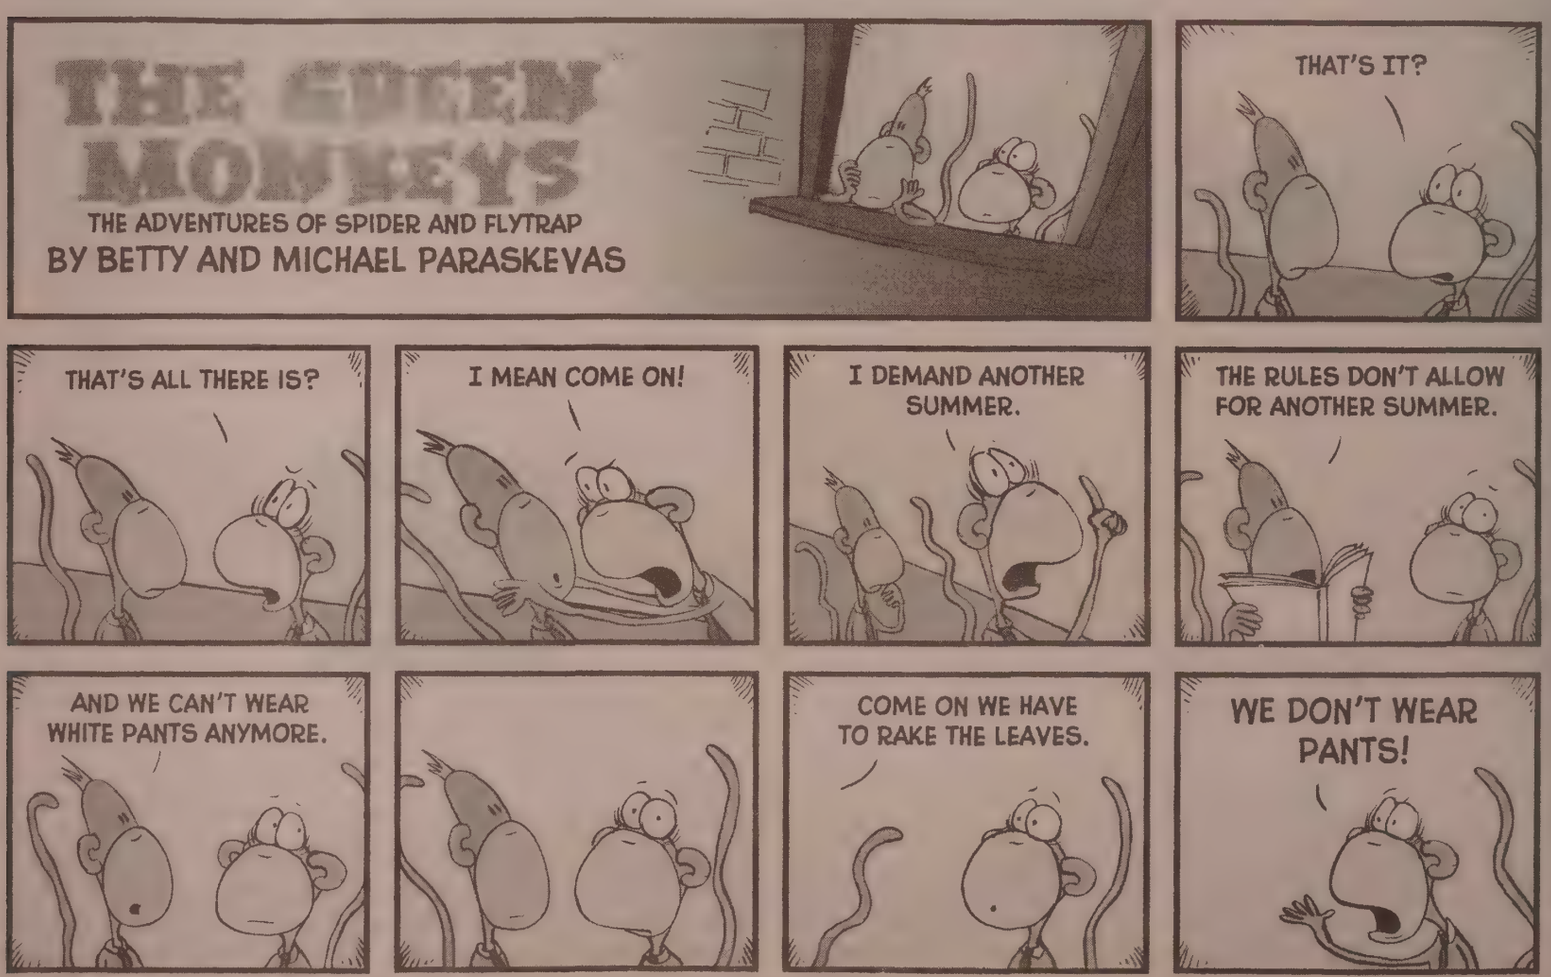

In late September 1898, the soldiers, all 32,000 of them, attended by nurses, doctors and local residents from East Hampton and Southampton who acted as a Red Cross, shipped out for their homes. The Village of Montauk was abandoned again.

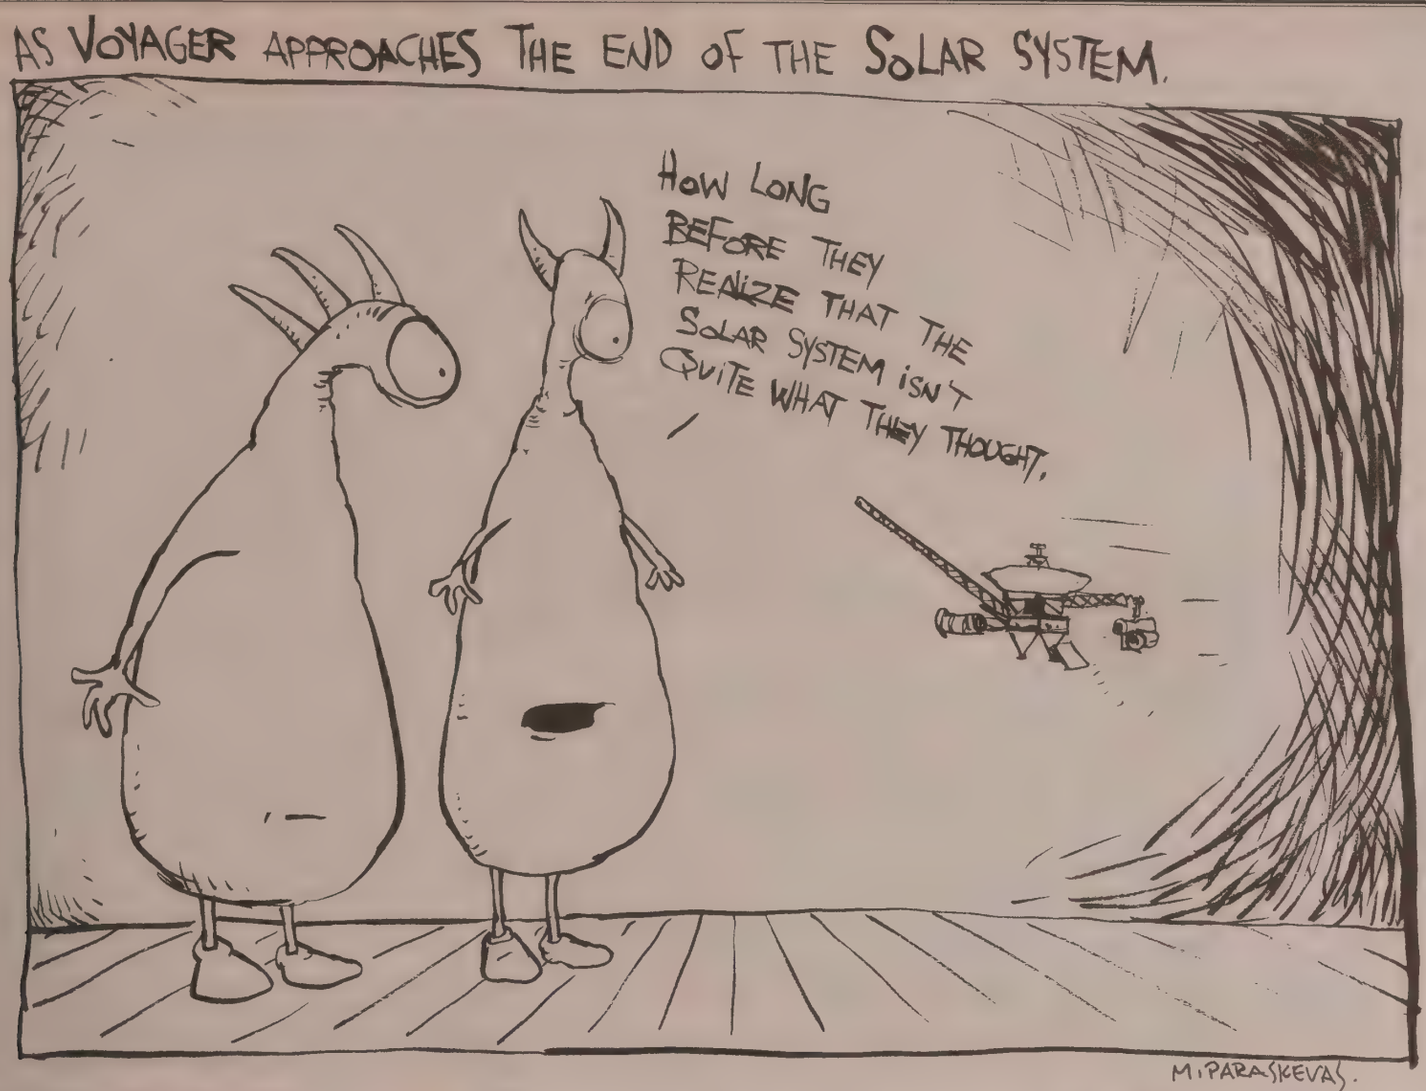

The following summer, a group of Canadian fishermen from Nova Scotia found what was essentially a fisherman's dream on Fort Pond Bay and adopted it as their summer home. The property was still owned by the railroad, but the railroad didn't seem to mind that the fishermen tied up their boats there and moved into some of the small wooden military facilities that remained. The Nova Scotians, some of whom spoke French and some of whom spoke English, provided much needed cargo for the railroad, hauling wooden crates of fish in ice onto the railroad cars for the trip into the fish markets of Manhattan.

Over the next decade, in these unusual circumstances, there thus arose this extraordinary village of largely bilingual fishermen and their wives and families, not far from the elegant high society summer homes of the millionaires in the Hamptons.

Homes were built, modest ones to be sure. The Scotians did not own the land. Also, they were not American citizens. But after the crash of 1929, when this country went into the worst depression in its history and most towns and villages suffered high unemployment, the Montauk Fishing Village thrived and grew. The reason was not just fish. It was also bootleg liquor. This remote village of about 300 residents could have paved its streets with gold from the shower of money that came its way because of rumrunning. The gangsters in their big black limousines

Solar System News

The Eclipse In East Hampton And Messing With Pluto And Jupiter

By Dan Rattiner

There was a full eclipse of the moon visible in the Hamptons last week. It was the only one that has ever occurred in my lifetime that I remember everyone going out to see. And that's because the good Lord marketed it very, very well.

It took place on a Saturday evening out of season, when there was not much going on and we were all assembled. It was a special show, one time only, and only for the East Coast. It took place between 8 and 8:30 p.m., right after the dinner hour. The night sky was clear and twinkly with stars. And the moon was so bright and full you could see your shadow.

It was an absolutely legendary performance. All throughout our communities, on the beaches, on the Main Streets, on the front lawns of private homes, people left their desserts and coffee and went out to have a look. They talked animatedly as the world grew dim, turned to black, and then, a half-hour later, returned to normal. Silently, they went back inside.

Watching it from the front lawn of the Palm Restaurant in East Hampton, I tried to look beyond, beyond the moon, to something less well-known going on in our solar system that is far, far more extraordinary. Some of it involves planets circling the sun that are not even visible to the naked eye. All of it — which is happening today — was thought up in a lab in California before most of us were born. It is a remarkable story.

It would not be like Voyager II, where you could just fire it off in a straight line. Jupiter was a moving target.

The part of it that cannot be seen by the naked eye involves a small satellite that was launched from the earth as one of the earliest ventures of America's fledgling space program. It was called the Voyager. The year was 1971. What if we hurl something out into space?, a scientist at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, California, thought. There was technology in place that would enable a satellite to send data back to earth. There was solar technology in place that could power a satellite for as long as the light of the sun could reach it. It wouldn't have to be a very big satellite. Indeed, it wouldn't even have to be a very expensive satellite.

The project was approved that year, and during the next three years it was designed and built. It was called the Voyager II. Today, Voyager II is passing Pluto and a few asteroids beyond Pluto, it is still broadcasting a signal back to earth, and it has entered a part of the universe where the energy of the sun — its rays beaming out into space — is meeting the solar wind — the place in the universe where matter is hurtling in a completely other direction, due to the fact that our entire solar system is streaking along together to points unknown.

In nautical terms, Voyager II is entering the equivalent of the rip off Montauk. The Long Island Sound is going one way. The Atlantic Ocean is going another. Where they meet, the water churns and boils. In space, where they meet, things are still.

Estimates are that the light from the sun will power Voyager II for another twenty years. After that, with a half a century gone by, Voyager II will go dark and head off into the unknown.

If Voyager II's story today is interesting, the story of another probe, involved today with the planet Jupiter — that is visible to the naked eye — is absolutely fantastic.

Not long after the launching of the Voyagers in 1977, another scientist at the Jet Propulsion Lab got the idea to launch a satellite out toward a moon of Jupiter. Jupiter was very much in the news at the time. A new moon around that planet had recently been discovered and it was thought that there might be water on it. If there was water, could there be life? Thus it was decided that a new satellite, to be called Galileo, would be launched and equipped with a camera. When activated, it would be capable of sending back ten images a minute.

Design and construction times were calculated, and a prospective launch date sometime in the year 1980 was planned. The satellite would be sent out from a cargo bay aboard a three-stage launch vehicle from one of the first space shuttles.

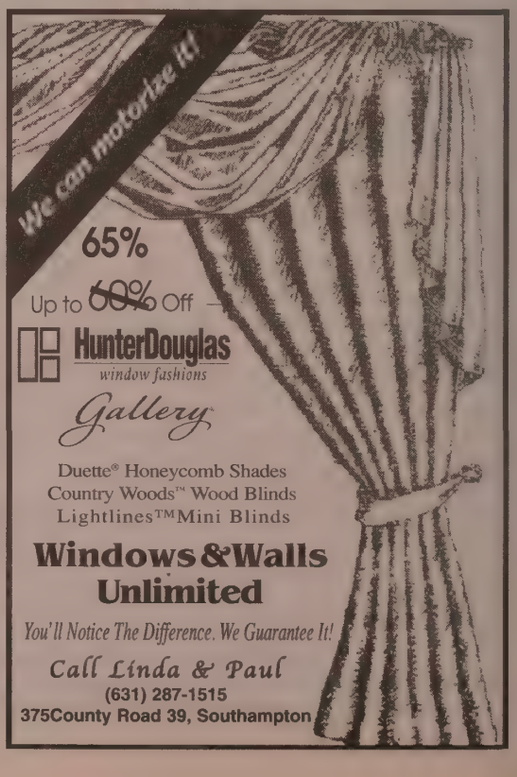

As the time approached, however, the idea of a three-stage launch vehicle was abandoned as too risky for the space shuttle. A different vehicle was selected, and Galileo went back for a complete redesign with a new launch date of 1983. But as that date approached, there was a funding delay. And after that, there was the Challenger disaster and all shuttle flights were grounded for two years. A new launch date was set. It would be in the fall of 1989.

These delays caused all kinds of problems. For one thing, Jupiter was no longer at a point where a shot at it would require the least amount of energy and time. It would not be like Voyager II, where you could just fire it off in a straight line. Jupiter was a moving target. Galileo would have to chase it. It would be a much tougher job for its tiny onboard motor to push it to Jupiter than it would be for Voyager II, still heading out toward Pluto, to fly beyond that planet and out into the unknown. Frankly, with Jupiter out of range, it was now just too far for Galileo to get to Jupiter.

Or so they thought. One scientist, Roger Diehl, who is the hero of this piece, spent over six months during the late 1980s doing nothing but working on the orbits and configurations of the planets to see if, perhaps using the gravitational pulls of various heavenly bodies, he could come up with a way to sort of sling shot Galileo toward Jupiter. He came up with it. Galileo would be fired off in the exact opposite direction from its intended target. It would head TOWARD the sun, not away from it, and it would slingshot around the planet Venus, return toward Earth to slingshot

Vroom, Vroom

Measuring Dirt Bike Sounds And Ordering More Route 27 Traffic Studies

By Dan Rattiner

A contractor in the Springs has gotten permission to conduct a study to see if dirt bikes make enough noise to bother the neighbors. He's going to get some kids with these bikes — he's in favor of dirt bikes — and he's going to have their parents bring them up to this dirt road by the East Hampton Gun Club and have them start them, and then let them idle there, rumbling for two hours. During this time the East Hampton Town Police will be on hand with decibel measuring machines to see how they make out.

The reason for all of this is that the contractor, Martin Drew, thinks that riding dirt bikes is a good activity for kids age 10 to 16, and he thinks he can prove they make no more noise than an ordinary lawn mower and that the town should not only put up with them, but find for them a site where they can engage in this activity without being harassed by some neighbors.

But that is not the point. The point is, that this is the first study that I know of on the East End that has been authorized by the town that will not cost the taxpayers anything.

I cannot tell you how many studies have been done on the East End in recent years to no result. They will study, for example, traffic. And they will come to the same conclusion that everybody comes to, which is "we really have no idea how to solve this problem," but it will take two years and cost half a million dollars and they won't actually say that, of course. When the "experts" present the study results, they will be told thank you very much, here's the money, but now it's two years later and this one is pretty much out of date and so we need to have another one.

"Without any legal place to drive their dirt bikes...these kids, eleven years old, are outlaws. That's not fair to them."

At that point, since it is usually after the elections, there is somebody new in power and so the old "expert" is sent away for the time being and a new "expert" is found to start a new study. And it goes on and on.

Just how the nuts and bolts fit together for all these studies was revealed for the first time two years ago when Southampton Town had paid a man $150,000 for a study about traffic and he was a year late with it and gave only excuses that he had personal problems and so they were out all this money and had not a single piece of paper to show for it.

Just how big his personal problems were was never made known but even an idiot would know that if you are paid $150,000 the very least you do is turn in 300 pages of gibberish so the people who asked you to do the study aren't politically embarrassed.

The delay went on and on. Finally, they paid him another $60,000 (instead of $100,000 he was still owed) — he was willing to accept that as a fine — and he turned something in that proposed a ten-story parking garage at the Westhampton Beach exit of the Sunrise Highway, and recommended that everybody park their cars there, ride monorails into the main villages, and then get on communally owned bicycles that would be waiting at all the stations and pedal them to wherever it was they had to go. Also, I think there was something with parachutes.

"We were really hoping to get some more realistic suggestions," one member of the Town Board said glumly, while crowing about the $40,000 they had just saved.

The study went onto the bookshelf with all the other studies. A puff of dust arose from the shelf. None of the studies had been used for any purpose whatsoever.

I think there is a whole profession of so-called "experts" who do studies for town, village, county, state and federal agencies. Some of them are Republican experts, some of them are Democratic experts. They get diplomas from TV courses, or they say they were born of American parents in China, where they got a doctorate on traffic solutions, and they show the framed documents, in Chinese, to prove it. Then, they stay at home and work out of a room which has a desk and computer in it. They get advances, deadlines and they crank the stuff out. None of it makes much more than a ripple, but they do get the job-completed-well-done check at the end. And so they do it again.

I know some fiction writers who follow this routine.

The dirt bike study is admirable — Martin Drew is sort of a hero to the kids of Springs — but really it isn't going to mean much. If you take two dirt bikes and stand them side by side and put them on idle for two hours, it is true they aren't going to bother the neighbors much. But that soft rumble at idle isn't the problem. The problem is 100 dirt bikes, lined up side by side, the helmeted kids watching the starter, and as the green flag goes down, every one of them twists the handlebar starter to FULL POWER and for two miles in every direction every dog lets out a cry of pain and dives under a bed.

What really ought to be done is that the police ought to go up there (in plain clothes) with their monitoring equipment, station it at a neighbor's house and just turn it on while the kids have a wonderful sunny Sunday afternoon, driving up and down the dirt roads. Maybe it's okay. Maybe it isn't. Then they would know.

"Without any legal place to drive their dirt bikes," Drew told the Town Board, "these kids, eleven years old, are outlaws. That's not fair to them. They need a place to do this."

"If your test shows that it is okay," Supervisor Schneiderman said, "we'll commission a full, independent, noise study. And then we'll go from there."

Going from there will mean making another study. And Schneiderman will be out of office by then. •

Cinderella Story

East Hampton HS Football Team Runs Into Huntington In The Semi-Finals

2003 East Hampton Bonackers football team

2003 East Hampton Bonackers football team

By Sarah Engel

The East Hampton Bonacker football team may have lost the battle this past Saturday, but, by many accounts, they won the war. Celebrating 80 years of football in 2003, the Bonackers, in their first post-season appearance since 1995, lost to Huntington in the semi-finals, 37-0. But the real story is in their making the playoffs at all, after eight up-and-mostly-down years.

In 1993, the Suffolk County sports poobahs reorganized the high school football format to four divisions of 12 teams each, the allocation to each division based on the school's student enrollment. The coaches were charged with rating the teams within each division, to create an 8 game schedule. They also decided to play a Long Island Championship, rather than compete in the New York State Championship. At that time, East Hampton was in Division IV along with most East End teams, and ended the season with a 4-3-1 record.

In 1994, the Bonackers were bumped up to Division III, and consolidated with players from Pierson (Sag Harbor) and Bridgehampton, the intent of which was to allow more athletes to participate in more sports. The move was based solely on enrollment, and according to coach David MacGarva, even without the addition of Pierson and Bridgehampton, East Hampton had sufficient numbers to be in Division III. In fact, there were four schools in that division with smaller enrollments than East Hampton, while many of the East End schools like Hampton Bays and Greenport were less than one third the size of East Hampton. A real worry at the time, though, was the amount of time and travel that playing a number of games away from the East End entailed, an issue that is still of concern today.

While many supporters began crying foul about the change, East Hampton, with a strong team, reached the Division III finals that year, only to be beaten by Comsewogue in the closing minutes of the game. They did, however, finish the season with a stellar 8-2 record.

1995 was another shining year, and again, the Bonackers made the playoffs. Again, their hopes were dashed in the semi-finals by a loss to nemesis Comsewogue, a team they have never beaten. Their final record for the year was 6-3.

And then the wheels came off. East Hampton did not reach another playoff until this year. Local handwringers were still blaming the rigidity of Suffolk County enrollment rules and the bump to Division III. Perhaps legitimately, they also blamed the pre-season ranking within the division, which determined who their opponents would be during the regular season. For a number of years based on that ranking, East Hampton was forced to compete with the strongest teams in Division III, which certainly contributed to the drought. Many thought that a winning football team at East Hampton was remote at best, a celebration relegated to the past.

East Hampton was forced to compete with the strongest teams in Division III, which certainly contributed to the drought.

And then it happened. This year East Hampton came into the season with a ranking of eleven out of the fourteen teams. Because Huntington was ranked number one, the Bonackers and Blue Devils did not meet during the regular season. Whether or not the pre-season ranking played a part in this year's accomplishment, it does not take away from the impressive football East Hampton exhibited this year. For most of the season they led Division III and concluded the regular season with a 6-2 record, leading to a third place seed in the playoffs.

Coach MacGarva attributes the Bonacker's success in 2003 to a number of factors. First, potential players are starting their training much earlier, as young as 10 years old. No longer are athletes arriving in ninth grade having never played organized football and with no development at all, as was the case just a few years ago. This is creating a larger pool of talent feeding into the football ranks. Second, both the junior varsity and varsity attended an intense preseason camp to hone their skills and team play. Much of East Hampton's achievement this year has been as a result of a strong line, due in large part to the work of line coach Steve Redlus, who was a member of the 1994 winning Bonacker team. Specifically, an increase in weight training has beefed up the players, especially the offensive and defensive front lines. Finally, Coach MacGarva strives to extend the concept of 'team' for his players, beyond the practice and playing fields. He has arranged a number of events and award dinners, including a trip during the bye week to a Rutgers football game.

In Saturday's game, after winning the toss, East Hampton elected to kickoff, and Huntington returned the ball for a 77-yard touchdown. This was an unfortunate foreshadowing of things to come, as Huntington pounded both East Hampton's offense and defense, and the Bonackers were held to only 140 yards. The Blue Devils will face Amityville in the District III final this coming Saturday.

Fans hope East Hampton's momentum and stepped-up training will carry them to the post-season again next year. But while they lost the playoff battle this year, the Bonackers have proved they are big enough to be in the Division III war. • around that, then slingshot around the Earth a second time, and thus, having gathered more and more speed with each maneuver—there is no friction in space—it would head toward its rendezvous with Jupiter. Needless to say, this would require the most complicated bit of navigational adjustments in history.

And so, on October 18, 1989, Galileo was launched aboard the space shuttle Atlantis and soon released from the cargo bay toward Jupiter. In 2002, Galileo began its approach to Europa, the newly discovered moon of Jupiter, and they turned the camera on. It didn't work. The problem, the data told them, was that the camera's antenna would not deploy.

Roger Diehl, who had started working on this project 22 years ago, was brought back in from retirement. What could he tell the current staff of the Jet Propulsion Lab about Galileo that they didn't already know? This was 2002, not 1980. They knew there was a very primitive computer on board that was loaded with the software in use at that time. Indeed, they had such software, now obsolete, at the lab, which communicated with Galileo. But to send it new software, to send new instructions to make that antenna deploy, they'd have to talk to it in the twenty-two year old language that it could understand in ways never intended. Diehl could provide them with that ability.

He also told them that back then, there was fear that the tiny microchip on board that powered the camera might fail and so there were five other microchips standing by adjacent to it. If software could set them up in parallel, it would increase the power to the camera fivefold.

Over the next few months, last year, efforts were made to get the antenna to deploy. They could not do it. What they could do, however, was to get a very weak signal from the camera that would enable it to take one picture a month. It was something.

But it was not really anything more than the new twenty-first century telescopes on the ground could tell them. They had pho-

The Shinnecocks Could Seek Federal Recognition Directly Through Congress

By Jerry Cimisi

Recently, we reported on the efforts of the Shinnecocks of Southampton to seek federal recognition from the Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA). This is the route most tribes seeking recognition travel, but there is another way to go about it: perhaps one more direct, but less utilized — Congress itself. Congress has recognized ten tribes previously ruled ineligible by the BIA.

The Lumbees, a tribe in North Carolina, are currently undergoing this procedure. This year there were bills introduced in both the House and Senate to have the tribe federally recognized. On September 17, there were hearings on the matter before the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs.

What the Lumbees have gone through over the years illustrates not only the obvious difficulties Indian tribes confront, but also the more subtle difficulties the tribes face when petitioning the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

When Europeans first began to colonize the Carolinas in the 1600s, portions of various tribes came together to form one tribe. Much of the tribe's descent is Sioux and Cheraw. Known by other names in the past, today the Lumbees are the largest tribe not recognized by the government; the tribe comprises 55,000-60,000 people. In 1899, a bill was introduced in Congress to grant the Lumbees recognition, but the bill was opposed by the Department of Interior, possibly (probably) because of the cost of servicing such a large tribe. The State of North Carolina, however, has recognized the Lumbees since 1895.

Before the federal recognition process begun in 1978 by the BIA, tribes were recognized — or terminated — by Congress.

> ...whereas petitions once ran 50 pages...they could now be as much as 1,000 pages in order to fulfill all the documentation required.

The Lumbees have no reservation, as the Shinnecocks have. If they were to be granted federal recognition, they would have to be granted land for a reservation.

The Lumbees petitioned the BIA in 1987. It took the Bureau two years before they told the tribe their documents were insufficient.

All throughout the 1900s, the Lumbees continued their efforts for recognition, but were hampered by government claims, in 1914 and 1934, that anthropologists had found that only a small number of those claiming to be Lumbee could prove they were of at least 50 percent Indian ancestry. In fact, as far back as the 1830s, a government survey claimed, only 22 Lumbee could be called Indian.

Remarking on this, Hunter Gray, a Lumbee, wrote recently, that like most southern tribes, the Lumbee had a good deal of African mixture, and this fact had always been used to negate a true Indian heritage.

In two appearances before Congress (in 1995 and 2000) regarding Lumbee recognition, attorney Arlinda Locklear, a member of the tribe, criticized some of the essential procedures the BIA had set for federal recognition, especially the matter of a tribe being documented as such, since historical times. She said that centuries ago, tribes often avoided contact with European record keepers.

Also, tribes that moved from one area to another because of European colonization would find it difficult or impossible to establish a continual identity in one locale, as the BIA stipulates necessary. She criticized the BIA's 1994 ruling that 50 percent of the tribal members must live in a set geographic area, and that there must be a 50 percent in-tribal marriage rate. She believes many tribes that were given federal recognition in previous years, before these new rules, would never have met these criteria.

She added that the political structure that the BIA demands of petitioners is not normally used by many tribes before they are settled on reservations.

It is also important to note that the BIA is ruling on the recognition of tribes it would eventually have to service out of its own budget. Locklear said this could only cause an institutional bias.

She also took issue with the fact that there is no time limit set for the BIA to rule on a tribe's petition.

The Senate Committee on Indian Affairs was established in the early 1800s, then abolished in 1946. Starting that year, and lasting through the 60s and into the 70s, was a period known as a time of "Termination" for many tribes, as the government sought to end federal recognition it had previously granted. In fact, from 1954-1964, Congress passed fourteen acts that took back federal recognition for 109 tribes. A number of these tribes were later "re-recognized."

To rectify this, the Bureau of Indian Affairs began to consider petitions for recognition in 1978 and the Senate Committee for Indian Affairs was reestablished in 1977. Currently its two sitting members are Senators Ben Nighthorse Campbell, who is an Indian from Arizona, and Daniel Inouye of Hawaii. By the way, in that state, descendents of the original Hawaiians are also seeking federal recognition as a native people.

By the 1990s there were plenty of complaints about the BIA's recognition process. At the beginning of that decade only eight of 129 petitions for federal recognition had been granted. John Shepard, a former BIA official who had been instrumental in creating the Bureau's federal recognition procedure, said it had gotten too burdensome for tribes: whereas petitions once ran 50 pages or so, they could now be as much as 1,000 pages in order to fulfill all the documentation required.

Currently there are 562 federally recognized tribes. Only eight percent have gotten recognition since 1960.

Another group of Indians who have taken their case to Congress is a newly created alliance of six tribes in Virginia. They have formed VITAL (Virginia Indian Tribal Alliance for Life). Ironically, Virginia, which has the earliest English settlement in America (1607), has no federally recognized tribes — although there are tribes recognized by the state.

VITAL presented its case to Congress at a hearing. A bill was introduced to grant the tribes federal recognition. And to gain support and funds for their efforts, the tribes held a massive powwow in the spring of 2002 — the largest powwow, the tribes said, they've held in 400 years. But last autumn, an official for the Department of the Interior (under whose auspices the BIA is run) said the Department was opposed to Congressional recognition for VITAL, saying that these tribes should not be allowed to bypass the standards that other tribes have met at the BIA.

It is interesting to note that just recently, the National Association of Convenience Stores urged Congress to issue a one-year moratorium on the federal recognition of Indian tribes. The Association said that small stores suffer when tribes issue tax-free cigarettes and fuel to non-Indians.

The branch of the Pequot Indians that opened Foxwoods Casino received federal recognition through Congress. Apparently, this was due not only to the tribe's legitimate claims as a tribe, but to settle lawsuits or possible lawsuits regarding rightful landownership concerning Indians and non-Indians in Connecticut. The Pequots got federal recognition, were given certain land and thus dropped claims they had on other land.

At any rate, the Shinnecock, who were one of the earliest tribes to apply for federal recognition under the Bureau of Indian Affairs, and who appear to fit every criteria the BIA has set for recognition, should be watching what happens to tribes such as the Lumbees. If Congress grants this tribe recognition, and if the BIA sits on the Shinnecock petition for too long, the Shinnecock would seem to stand a good chance of being successful, should they approach Congress with their own case. •

Who's Here

Edward Bleier

Network Executive

By Cathie Gandel

Edward Bleier, a long-time resident of East Hampton, has been in marketing and communications all of his working life, and with considerable success. Thus it was not out of character for him to do a little market research before pursuing his idea of a book that would introduce a new tradition to what is arguably America's favorite holiday: Thanksgiving.

So he turned to some of his friends and neighbors here on the East End - Alan and Arlene Alda, Peter Jennings and Kayce Freed, and Steven Spielberg among others - to ask what they thought of bringing a more spiritual focus back to Thanksgiving. He had in mind a short ritual, modeled after the Passover Haggadah, that involved everyone seated around the Thanksgiving table, and recalling the history and meaning of the holiday.

In short, a Thanksgiving ceremony. "I asked people with very diverse approaches to the world, people who are in touch with the American zeitgeist, if the idea had any merit," Ed said during a telephone interview. Bottom line: the idea got huge approval ratings from his pilot audiences. The result: The Thanksgiving Ceremony, a 120-page book that has just been published by Crown and is available on Amazon.com.

Not that Ed sat down one weekend in his 1902 farmhouse in East Hampton and hammered out the book. The idea of creating a participatory ceremony for the Thanksgiving meal had been a dream of his for about 25 years. The Thanksgiving Ceremony is, above all, a very personal book, formed by his own experiences from childhood to the present.

Ed was born of immigrant parents whose story, as he says in the Introduction, could have been the model for Fiddler on the Roof. His mother emigrated from the Ukraine when she was nine years old. His father was the son of Austrian immigrants, the first of ten children to be born in America. In the Bleier household, Thanksgiving was more than a sumptuous feast, although it was certainly that. It was also a time for "informal proclamations of thanks, silent prayers and spontaneous marvels that America was so welcoming." The book encourages a return to these aspects of the holiday.

President Abraham Lincoln's Thanksgiving Proclamation of 1863 established the tradition of marking the last Thursday in November as a "day of Thanksgiving and praise." But somewhere between 1863 and 2003, the holiday became little more than a huge meal, a long nap and football.

"Ed knew that there was more to Thanksgiving than that," says Ed's wife, Magda Palacci. "And he realized the holiday needed a focus, a reminder of why we were all sitting down to a meal of Thanksgiving in the first place. The ceremony provides that focus."

As the book jacket points out, this tradition is "the first thing that's new about Thanksgiving since the turkey.."

As the book jacket points out, this tradition is "the first thing that's new about Thanksgiving since the turkey: a participatory ceremony that any group of family and friends can read around the table before the great meal begins." And the review in Publishers Weekly commends Ed for creating the template for a family ceremony designed to change the country's current focus on "feast and football."

The book includes a brief history of Thanksgiving, the ceremony itself and a third section of inspirational readings from people as diverse as Maya Angelou, Irving Berlin, Woody Guthrie, and Emily Dickinson.

Ed explains, "People can follow the ceremony as it's presented or create their own using the additional readings. But I wanted to make the point that despite all our differences, for twenty or thirty minutes once a year, we can all be on the same page."

Having written the core, he proceeded to research recipes, table settings, and napery. He thus created a comprehensive cookbook in which the ceremony was only a part. He took the larger book to an agent who asked, "Would you mind if we dropped the cookbook part?" It was back to basics.

The book's small size makes it easy to hold at the table, and it is affordable, particularly suited to those who want to buy multiple copies. And many have. When Magda Palacci offered to have her husband sign some copies for a friend, she was told that the friend had bought 26 books, one for each of her guests. The ceremony is short: the group around the Thanksgiving table can finish in roughly the time it takes the turkey to "sit" after being taken out of the oven. That means the cook can participate without worrying that the meal will be ruined.

Ed's been coming to the East End since 1961 when he bought property in East Hampton. Two years later, he bought the farmhouse he and Magda are just now enlarging.

"Sure the area has changed," Ed admits, "but you can't destroy the uniqueness of the East End. We have the beach, the farmland, the most beautiful village in the world, and a greater concentration of achievers in art and culture than anyplace besides Manhattan." And he should know. He has served as chairman of the Academy of the Arts of East Hampton's Guild Hall, a group that votes annually to give lifetime achievements in the performing arts, visual arts and literary arts. "The Guild Hall list is equal to any list of Academy Award winners or Nobel Laureates," he says.

His career in media began at Syracuse University where he met William Safire, his long-time friend, and the author of the Foreword to The Thanksgiving Ceremony. "My first job was producing a radio show for the campus radio station," Ed says. "Bill Safire wrote it and Dick Clark was the announcer."

Syracuse – although he did finally get his college diploma in 1994. "I'm the class of 1951/94," he says. Back in New York after a stint in the army, he was offered a job by Don Hewitt, but "ABC offered me $25 a week more, so I went to work for ABC in sales," Ed says. "I left the editorial side and became a 'suit.'"

During his years as a "suit" at ABC, Ed was responsible for integrating the game shows and soap operas that were the staple of ABC daytime television. He moved to Warner Communications because he could see there would be a burgeoning of new, more specialized TV stations, and he recognized the power of having well-known, pre-sold product to show on those new stations.

With The Thanksgiving Ceremony, Ed returns to the editorial side.

"Now I can play for the writers in the annual Artists & Writers Softball Game," he says. "As a 'suit' I always thought my natural place was as an umpire next to Dan Rattiner."

That softball game is one of Ed's favorite Hamptons' activities. "It's a level playing field, so to speak," he explains. "Out there you don't know or care who the boss is. Everyone is just a softball player."

Ed Bleier's motivation for creating and writing The Thanksgiving Ceremony can best be summed up by the last paragraph in his Introduction: "By designing this narrative for the Thanksgiving holiday, I hope to provide continuity from year to year, and from generation to generation – as well as continuity across all of America on the Thursday in November designated as Thanksgiving."

Ed's East End friends, those who gave a "thumbs up" at the beginning, are still enthusiastic about the book. Alan and Arlene Alda note, "There are times, like these, when it's important to count our blessings. Ed Bleier's delightful book helps us do the math." And Stephen Spielberg uses a fitting holiday metaphor when he writes, "Over the years I've had so many Thanksgiving dinners with Ed and Magda that when Ed Bleier talks turkey, all of us listen."

With The Thanksgiving Ceremony, Ed has created another hit. He worries that his book may have a short life, but it will most certainly show up in reruns in early November every year. •

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Observations of an Islander #275
What happens in the Dory, stays in the Dory.

In the movie The Green Mile, the characters repeat the phase, "What happens on the mile, stays on the mile." Las Vegas has a new campaign that paraphrases that line with, "What happens in Vegas, stays in Vegas. "On Shelter Island it's, "What happens in the Dory, stays in the Dory."

Recently I read about a reality TV show in London that tricks a group of men into winning the affections of a beautiful "woman" who is actually a man. The show's creators are facing a threatened lawsuit from six contestants on the show, "There's Something About Miriam," who are trying to prevent the program from being broadcast.

It reminded me of the two times I've seen transsexuals on Shelter Island. Once was in the Dory a few years back. I knew the genitally challenged women were transsexuals because of their big hands, feet and the heavy primordial brows, among their other male features.

Anyway, it was a dark and stormy night at the Dory. This transsexual had a local lad really interested. I sat there knockin' back Shirley Temples worrying about the flirtation going on at the bar. I knew that if this guy got a surprise at the wrong moment, the police would never find the body.

I sat there hoping the 'woman' knew what she was doing. I thought about following her to the bathroom and just kinda giving her a caution light about flirting with the local guys, but I couldn't figure out how to start the conversation...and what if I was wrong? I had to come up with a perfect opener.

"Hi, I'm Sally. Say, I was just noticing your thick primordial brow....."

"Hi, I'm Sally. You're such an ugly woman, is there any chance you're actually a man?"

"Hi, I'm Sally. I noticed you're a transsexual, uh, nice boobs by the way. No, that's okay, I can look at my own later...."

"Hi, I'm Sally. I noticed you're a transsexual, I was just wondering if you still have... uh... well, you know that's a real regular guy you're making time with at the bar... when you start discussing what you have in common...."

"Hi, I'm Sally.I noticed you're a transsexual....Oh you're not? My mistake. No. I have no idea what made me say that. Dick's been spikin' my Shirley Temples for years....".

"Hi, I'm Sally. Excuse me, I just happen to have a jar of spaghetti sauce in my handbag, can you get this open for me? Thanks. I see you popped that lid right off. Listen, could we have a girl to near-girl talk in the bathroom?"

"Hi, I'm Sally. Any chance you have an extra tampon?"

"Hi, I'm Sally. I can see you're new to this gender and maybe I can give you a few pointers? Or maybe you have all you want?"

"Hi, I'm Sally. That's a really sweet local boy you're talking with at the bar. Did you know he has a huge family here on the Island? Very nice people, very traditional, very old- fashioned. They have that whole 'only opposite sex people should get married' thing... no, just thought I'd mention it. Hey, I love your earrings."

"Hi, I'm Sally. Forgive me, I couldn't help noticing the ways you were cracking walnuts with your bare hands at the bar. How do you do that without breaking your nails? Oh...I dunno, thought I might give it a shot sometime...."

Before I had a chance to run interference, they left together. I saw the guy a few days later, I was absolutely dying to ask. I was halfway up to him when I changed my mind. But our eyes had already met and he knew I was about to say something to him. I didn't want to sound like an idiot, so I just said, "Hey, guess what? I can crack walnuts with my bare hands and a small hammer now! "He looked bewildered, but I think he knew I suspected he knew what I thought I knew about what he knew... and since we both knew what I was talking about, he just nodded and walked away...because what happens in the Dory, stays in the Dory.

Chinese Canopy Wedding Bed $10,500.

This is a beautifully detailed curvilinear wedding bed with a full-moon opening reflecting the maker's respect for classic Chinese symmetry and balance. It is made in the Province of Shanxi, China during the late 19th century. The large and sumptuous canopy bed (82"W x 41"D x 77"H), with its variety of decorative techniques and motifs, has rich and noble beauty. The high-waisted base has pillar-shaped struts and panels ornamented with flower and birds, ancestral figures in low relief. The apron is carved with circular curling limbed birds and floral scenes. The side and back railings and canopy lattice are all made by joining the straight and assembling the curved. Although the design is complex, the overall effect of order prevails over such an extensive surface.

Available at Christian K. Andrews, #7 Tradesman Path (Off Butter Lane), Bridgehampton. 631-537-2877.

would drive out and hire them. They would go fishing by day, but at night, they would motor out and unload boxes of bootleg liquor that had been brought down by freighter from Canada. The fishermen would meet the freighters off the 12 mile limit, in legal international waters, and they would take the haul into Fort Pond Bay and carry it off into the woods. Truckers from New York would arrive before dawn and carry it away. This was a thriving business.

In 1933, the U. S. Congress repealed the prohibition laws. Five years later, in September of 1938, the Hurricane of '38, considered the greatest natural disaster of modern times on Long Island, roared through Montauk, its great tidal wave washing across the narrow Montauk peninsula and flooding the Montauk Fishing Village. More than half of the homes on the Bay were torn off their foundations, and either shattered to tinder or floated away and sunk, and the other half suffered severe damage. The villagers spent the summer of 1939 repairing this damage that had been done and wondering if another hurricane would smash the village again.

In 1940, with Europe under the thumb of the Nazis after a year of war, and with the English fighting on alone, President Franklin D. Roosevelt chose the arc of Fort Pond Bay to build a naval installation to test torpedoes. It was easy enough to lease the property from the railroad — not only the tracks and the station and the docks and all the land in between — and it was also easy to bulldoze down all the fishermen's houses that had been built there illegally. There was an outcry. It did no good. The Japanese would bomb Pearl Harbor within the year.

Most of the uprooted fishermen moved their boats to the new docks in Lake Montauk that had been constructed after a channel was dynamited so the Lake would connect up with Block Island Sound. They thrived there. The descendents of many of these Canadian fishing boat captains run charter boats out of Montauk today.

In 1957, as a teenager, I came along with my mom and dad when they moved out to Montauk. My dad, a pharmacist, had bought White's Drug and Department Store. One of the things that came with the store was a lease for some warehouse space in what was then an abandoned torpedo testing station on Fort Pond Bay. There were about a dozen large military buildings there at that time, mostly made of cinder blocks. There were the docks and, down what was called Navy Road, a giant seaplane hanger, where the aircraft that the naval observers used to follow the trails of the torpedoes, were sheltered. Torpedoes had come into Montauk on railroad cars from New York to be tested in the bay, and then they were sent back again.

In 1960, I started what has since become Dan's Papers. One of the reasons I did was because I wanted people to know of the many stories told to me by the now retired fishing boat captains who had lived through the rumrunning days 30 years before. I'd talk to them over coffee at Salivars or Pier One at the docks in Lake Montauk when they came down there to watch their sons come in with the catch.

"I was just a kid back then," one of them told me. "But I sure saw all the black cars and men in suits in town and I remember all the activity. My mother had told me to stay clear of it and I did. I remember one day, sitting on the end of a dock, hearing gunfire off in the distance. As I watched, I saw one of the local boats, with three men on board, come racing through the Bay, about two hundred yards ahead of some Coast Guard men who were firing at them. The two boats were going about the same speed, but every once in a while, one of the Montaukers would appear on deck carrying a box of something and, braving the gunfire, throw it overboard. It would make a big splash and the fishing boat would speed up a little. After three of these, the fishing boat began to pull away and get away from the Coast Guard men and they disappeared off to the west of me.

"But I had got up when I first saw the man with the box. I carefully marked the spot where the box went down. Then I marked the second box and the third box. I was pretty comfortable that that night I could go out in a launch and dive down there with some rope and a flashlight and haul them up.

"And so I did. Good Canadian whiskey. We sold some and drank some. I was a hero for a few days."

In the mid-1980s, the old Torpedo Testing Station was bulldozed down and replaced with a condominium resort called Roughrider's Landing to honor where Teddy Roosevelt had come triumphantly ashore. Nearby, there are a few remnants of the old Montauk Fishing Village. Besides the schoolhouse on Industrial Road, on Tuthill Road just to the north of Roughrider's

Authors Writing About The Hamptons

The author of the highly acclaimed biography of Allard Lowenstein, The Pied Piper, Richard Cummings is a noted playwright (Soccer Moms From Hell), essayist and poet. He has taught at the University of Addis Ababa in Ethiopia and the University of the West Indies in Barbados, and is also an international lawyer with degrees from Princeton, Columbia Law School and Cambridge University (Ph.D.) and is a member of the Association of Former Intelligence Officers.

The Immortalists

by Richard Cummings

Joe went to the annual gathering at Myrna Farber's every summer in East Hampton, and each time he swore he would never go again.

Myrna's idol, Bijan Katami, organized the events. No one knew where Bijan Katami was actually from. Joe was beginning to find him boring. Joe ate meat, and meat-eaters universally detest vegetarians. Margo told him that perhaps it was the meat that was undermining his sexual abilities. Joe dismissed this as naive New Ageism.

Joe hated "New Age" stuff even more than vegetarianism. The amorphous , repetitive music infuriated him. Olga played it while she was giving him a massage. She was actually the only one who could make him stop thinking about death. But now it was a full summer later, and he once again at Myrna Faber's, standing around on the lawn with a crowd of Upper West Side types looking for a final insight before they passed from middle to old age. He watched Bijan Katami charm a small circle of admirers....

Olga was waiting for him in front of the Huntting Inn, a New England-like hotel with an open porch which housed a branch of The Palm, a restaurant that featured giant slabs of meat and lobster.

She looked like a statue, six feet tall in brown leather sandals. Her astonishingly blond hair was cut short, giving her the aura of a beautiful blond assassin in a James Bond movie. She was in her late thirties. A white canvas bag sat at her feet.

"Twice the fee for a house call," she joked.

"Since when?"

"Since now. I'm not getting any younger. I have to think about my retirement."

Joe picked up the bag, and she got in the car, swinging her legs gracefully. He took a sharp left at Guild Hall onto Further Lane. She caught a glimpse of the Episcopal church. Olga turned to him. "Do people here actually pray?"

"How would I know? I expect so."

He spun through the Maidstone Club golf course. Sea gulls swooped and glided above them. One came low and dropped bird shit on the windshield.

"It doesn't care how much money you've got," Olga laughed. "Or maybe it does. Maybe it's making a statement. Does Margo want a massage, too?"

"I forget she was going to Connecticut to see her mother."

"O.K., you get my full attention."

"I need it. My neck is killing me."

She put her hand on his neck and massaged it briefly. "Full of knots. We'll get them out."

"Maybe I should take up golf."

"Would they let you in this club?"

"They made Ribbentrop's grandson a member, but never me. An Italian Jew from Brooklyn? Are you kidding?"

"I didn't know you were Jewish."

"I'm not really. I was raised Catholic. But my mother was Jewish. So to the Nazis, I would still be a Jew."

The main building of the Maidstone Club was to their right. They whizzed past, turning right off Further Lane, onto a private road past some farmland and down to the beach.

"Listen," Olga paused. "You can hear the ocean."

"Of course you can hear the ocean. We're on the beach...."

Joe picked up the Jitney at 69th and Lex and sat in a seat toward the rear. A girl in a green Hampton Jitney shirt offered him a New York Times, which he accepted.... Forcione could feel the rage building inside him. At Fortieth Street, the bus filled up with fashion designers, investment bankers, Eurotrash, models and lawyers. They all seemed to have cell phones, which went off incessantly. The mandate to limit the use of the phones to three minutes fell on deaf ears. As they entered the Thirty Fourth Street tunnel, Joe felt increasingly claustrophobic; he was overcome by a sense that he could easily strangle everyone on the bus, particularly those who had escaped with their Walkmen..."

Landing, there is a private residence on the Bay which seems to be composed of four separate small buildings. You can look up the driveway. It will be immediately apparent that two of these buildings are relatively new. The two older ones are from the Montauk Fishing Village, moved out of the way, just a hundred yards to the east and north, when the Navy bulldozers came through.

If you want to see a scale model of the old Montauk Fishing Village, go to the East Hampton Marine Museum on Bluff Road in Amagansett, which this time of year is open by appointment. On a table in the museum there is such a scale model, built with the help of old photographs and the accounts of some of those that were there at the time. It is quite an amazing thing to see. Solar (continued from page 24) tographed jagged lines on Europa. What were they? The resolution of these photos was about the same as could be gotten by the tiny camera aboard Galileo. What was really needed was a constant stream of photographs of Europa. Perhaps at the rate of one a minute. From that they could construct a film of Europa, in motion. Maybe that would tell them something.

But there was very little time. Galileo was programmed to pass Europa within a year and dive to its death in the very heart of Jupiter sometime in the fall of 2003. The scientists went back to work.

Indeed, at the beginning of 2003, by sending new software instructions, they were able to get all the microchips to work in parallel. The signal was stronger, but still not as strong as had been originally planned. On the other hand, in the window of time remaining, now just months, they were able to get Galileo to send one photograph every day, and it was enough. Using 3D imaging at the Lab, they were able to tie them together and make their movie, and that movie provided them with the answer to the jagged lines.

There WAS water on Europa. It was about fifty miles below the icy surface of that moon, huge oceans of it. The jagged lines had come about because of the terrific pull of gravity of Jupiter on Europa, jerking the water this way and that as it circled around, bulging the surface during one half of the orbit and then depressing it the other. The ice would crack. The surface matter would break into jagged plates, moving against one another. Thus the jagged lines.

On the night of the full moon, as the bright shadow of the earth overwhelmed the shining disk of our moon for half an hour, off to the right in the night sky one could see the ever brightening twinkling light of Jupiter, now taking into its bosom the first object made by intelligent beings from another planet so far away. The eclipse waned and the moon brightened. Jupiter seemed to dim.

It was an extraordinary evening on the East End. •

Dan's North Fork

The North

Pumpkin Cheesecake, 2003 Novello, And Great Leftovers

Thanksgiving. This holiday, though it symbolizes an historic moment in United States history, today is generally celebrated with a feast among family members that are often far flung the rest of the year. In fact, Thanksgiving is the most traveled of holidays, surpassing even Christmas. There are many plans to plan and reservations to make, but fortunately today there are alternatives to slaving over hot ovens for days, roasting turkeys and baking traditional pies. Caterers have caught on to the fact that many of us just don't have time to "do it all," and so now provide everything from an order of homemade cranberry sauce to dinner for 50.

Since its inception seven years ago, Catering By A Small Affair, founded by owners Nikki and John Perry of Quogue, has quickly earned a solid reputation as one of the East End's premiere caterers. And they deliver! So even if you insist on roasting your own bird and making your own trimmings this season, catered desserts are a great quilt-free way to cheat a little.

And for Thanksgiving, Nikki and John are offering their now-famous Pumpkin Ginger Cheesecake, Cinnamon Apple Cream Strudel, and Pear Streusel Bundt Cake. If you order Sunday afternoon, they will deliver to your door on the North Fork on Wednesday, just before the family arrives! (See phone number below.)

And after the big feed is over? "Everyone knows the best thing about Thanksgiving dinner is the leftovers," says Nikki. "So here are some not-so-boring recipes for the days after." Bon appetit!

Savory Turkey Bread Pudding

A great way to use up leftover turkey and dinner rolls.
Makes 8 servings.

Suggested wine: Castello di Borghese's 2003 Novello.

1/4 cup unsalted butter, softened (1/2 stick)
2- 4oz. pkg. sliced mushrooms
1 cup diced onion
2 tsp chopped sage

Nikki and John Perry of Catering By A Small Affair

10 leftover dinner rolls (left uncovered at room temperature until dry, halved length wise from top to bottom).
20 slices leftover turkey (2 1/2 inches X 1 inch long)
8 oz shredded cheddar cheese
2 tsp chopped basil
2 large plum tomatoes
3 cup milk
6 large eggs
1 tsp. Dijon mustard
1/2 tsp. hot pepper sauce
1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese

1. With 1 tbsp. butter, grease shallow 2 1/2 quart casserole dish (or 13 x 9 x 2 inch baking dish).

2. In large non-stick skillet, melt 1 tbsp. of butter. Add mushrooms, onion, and sage. Cook 10 minutes until tender. Scatter mushroom mixture evenly into prepared dish.

3. Spread remaining butter on 1 cut side of roll half. Arrange halves on end on top of mushroom mixture. Layer turkey, cheese, basil and tomato slice on top of buttered side of roll.

4. In a bowl, whisk milk, eggs, mustard, and hot sauce. Pour over dish. Cover, refrigerate for a couple of hours or overnight.

5. Preheat oven to 350 Fahrenheit, uncover dish; top with parmesan. Bake 55-60 minutes, until puffed and golden brown, and knife inserted into center tests clean. Let cool 10 minutes.

Pumpkin Pie Baked Alaska

A creative approach for leftover pumpkin pie.
Makes 8 servings.

1 pint butter pecan ice cream (or any favorite flavour)
8 slices leftover pumpkin pie
1 cup sugar
1/2 cup water
8 egg whites
1 tsp. cream of tartar

1. Place oven rack in upper third of oven and set oven to broil. Line baking sheet with wax paper.

2. Using a two-inch diameter ice cream scoop, place scoop of ice cream on top of each pie slice. Place topped pie slice on prepared baking sheet and place in freezer.

3. In a small saucepan stir together sugar and water. Bring to a boil. When syrup reaches 236 degrees on candy thermometer, remove from heat and pour into a glass-measuring cup.

4. Place egg whites in bowl of a mixture with a whisk attachment and whip until foamy. Add cream of tartar and beat until stiff. Whip the sugar syrup into the egg whites slowly and continue to whip on high for two to three minutes.

5. Remove baking sheet with pie slices from freezer. Remove wax paper from under slices and place pie slices directly on baking sheet. 6. Cover pie and ice cream with meringue, swirling it with bake of spoon to form decorative peaks. Place under broiler to brown- almost instantly. Serve immediately.

If you are considering an event in the future, or would like to order a dessert for Thanksgiving, give Nikki and John a call at 728-SPICE (728-7742).

Celebrating Harvest Season At La Cuvée Bistro

Greenport, October 17

Guests lined up outside La Cuvée, the wine bar and French bistro located in the Greenporter Hotel owned by Deborah Rivera and her husband, William Pittorino, as local patrons and visiting tourists gathered in anticipation of celebrating this year's wine country harvest. Among the crowd were Peggy Lauber of Bedell Cellars/Corey Creek, winemaker Adam Suprenant of Osprey's Dominion, Pat Kiernan of Eastern Long Island Hospital's PR department, and Dr. Dan Damianos of Pindar Winery. The sophisticated bistro proved a splendid backdrop for this joyous annual event. –S.W.Simm, wine@danspapers.com

A Bottle Of Red From Mr. Merlot

The 2000 vintage, both here and in Bordeaux, has been hailed as potentially the best in many years. A long summer produced wonderfully ripe fruit and the red wines, just now beginning to be released, are noteworthy almost across the board.

This past week, I had the pleasure of opening Kip Bedell's (aka Mr. Merlot) 2000 Merlot, and it is delightful. The first evening I stacked it up against a fabulously spicy oven-barbequed beef brisket prepared to perfection by my husband David (he found the recipe in the Sunday Times Magazine, November 9), and the tannins stood up to the spice and heat just fine, thank you. But by the next evening, this time paired with a simple grilled steak, the wine had opened up so voluptuously and the fruit was so upfront that I nearly swooned. Wow. Give this wine a little room to breathe and it will reward you. Big time.

Kip describes the wine as having "aromas of spicy oak, black cherry and chocolate with a rich soft mouthfeel and long black cherry finish." It was aged for 14 months in French coopered American oak barrels, and is made from 100 percent Merlot grapes. Available at the winery in Cutchogue for $21. Highly recommended.

What wine to serve for Thanksgiving? Kip suggests his Bedell Cellars Main Road Red and 2000 Corey Creek Merlot ($13.50 and $19, at the winery). "Both wines are light and fruity and won't overpower the turkey. They also pair well with side dishes."

Second Annual Thanksgiving Benefit Barrel Tasting at Peconic Bay, Sunday, November 23, 2-6 p.m.: join PBW winemaker Greg Gove, at the winery on the Main Road in Cutchogue, as he draws and serves samples of the winery's 2002 Merlot, 2002 Cabernet Sauvignon, and 2002 Cabernet Franc, straight from the barrel. TV's David Rosengarten will host the event, and food prepared by top toques, including Christian Albin of Manhattan's Four Seasons and Michael Meehan of Southold's Seafood Barge, will be served. Tasting benefits the NYIT Culinary Arts Center. Tickets are $75 in advance. Call 734-7361.

Dan's North Fork

Red Door

Main Road, Mattituck, N.Y.
631-298-4800

If fine dining nourishes not only the body but the soul, prepare yourself for a spiritual experience as you pass through the formidable double red doors that mark the entrance to this gracious establishment located on the Main Road in Mattituck.

On a cold blustery evening that reminded one that winter is just weeks away, my husband John and I and friends Karen and Jim enjoyed just such dining.

For those of you who have not yet indulged, Red Door is a North Fork classic: food the caliber of which one would expect in Manhattan combined with the North Fork's low key charm. Housed in one of Mattituck's older Victorians, the decor is attractive, but not the least bit fussy. Crisp white table cloths and truly comfortable upholstered chairs, along with soothing lighting and background music, set the stage for a relaxing evening of culinary pleasures.

Which is exactly what chef/restaurateur Stephan Mazzella has in mind. He describes the fare as American regional with a Mediterranean influence. I describe it as just plain delicious.

We began our meal with three shared appetizers. The fresh lump crab cake served with paper thin slices of cucumber, tomato, red onion and a dollop of tartar was superb with plenty of kick. We also tried the spinach ricotta ravioli served in a well-herbed fresh tomato sauce that was "perfectly al dente," according to Karen. My personal favorite was the puff pastry-wrapped baked brie which arrived surrounded by a moat of raspberry sauce and a generous daub of currant chutney – mouth-watering though unfortunately served slightly less than piping hot.

Salads arrived next, ours an arugula endive mixture with sliced pear, walnuts and crumbled gorgonzola moistened with a balsamic vinaigrette. Jim and Karen couldn't resist the spinach salad with mushrooms, shaved fennel, dried cranberries and chickpeas in a bacon vinaigrette. Both were interesting, fresh and quite pleasing. It must be mentioned here that while many North Fork restaurants whittle the winter menu down to bare bones, Red Door still offers a variety of over ten appetizers and five salads even during the colder months. Those who, like me, are always looking to try something new, will find a panoply of choices year round.

Chef/owner Stephan Mazzella of Red Door

And while I'm digressing, I would also like to mention the wine list. Stephan trains his staff so that both the connoisseur and the neophyte can enjoy his huge selection of wines, many of which, even the high end offerings, are available by the glass (in winter, ten reds and eight whites) or the half bottle. Stephan says, "If you order four courses, you can have a different glass of wine with each course." And what's more, if you require a friendly suggestion, your waiter is fully capable and happy to help.

The entrees were so numerous that we were hard-pressed to decide. In the end, however, we chose two meat and two fish dishes. John selected the 16 ounce porterhouse pork chop with a honey, caper and cayenne glaze. Served with whipped sweet potatoes and a melange of roasted veggies, it was an excellent choice on a cold winter night, particularly for the diner with a hearty appetite.

I selected one of the evening's specials, striped bass served in a meniere sauce with fresh tomatoes, capers and kalamata olives – truly delectable. Accompanied by asparagus and crisp polenta wedges, I felt that I had chosen the evening's winner.

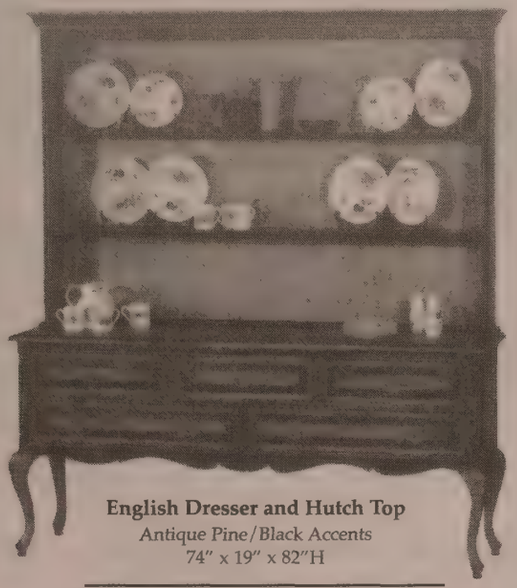

Not, however, according to Jim who is our resident duck afficionado. Roasted to perfection and served with a currant sauce, wild rice and roasted vegetables, Red Door's duck was given a double thumbs up. We heard little from Jim during the main course!

Karen tried the baked cod, lightly breaded and finished with a lemon cream sauce, which, in her words, was "flaky and buttery." Karen, by the way, is an outstanding cook; I've borrowed many a recipe from her over the years. And when she's impressed, I know the dish is well prepared.

It is said that timing is everything. While this

North Fork Critics' Choice

The "Best Of The Best" Of Our Dining Destinations

–Mattituck To Greenport–

And The Winner Is...

I think it is safe to say that Dan's Papers annual Best of the Best contest has indeed achieved institution status on the East End, and while we all know it's not who wins or looses, it's still a lot more fun to win. And speaking of winners, this year's lucky award recipients are spotlighted below. Just look for the designation at the end of each restaurant description, and follow the key to find out who won what. The list is impressive, but then so are today's dining options here on the North Fork.

–Susan W. Simm, Dan's North Fork Editor

2003 North Fork Best of the Best Winners

A-Ambiance, B-Bistro, Cou-Courtyard Dining, Cr-Crepes, Cu-Cuisine, D-Décor, E-Entrée Accompaniments, F-Fish Dish, L-Lobster Dish, Lo-Long Island Wine Selection, Mu-Mussels, O-Outdoor Dining, Se-Seafood Restaurant, Ser-Service, Sh-Shellfish Dish, So-Soft-Shelled Crabs, Sou-Soup, Sp-Special Dinners, Spe-Special Occasion Dining, St-Steak, Su-Sushi, T-Take Out, W-Wine List, Wi-Wines by the Glass.

Do Little's. Very welcoming and unpretentious. An excellent menu for diners interested in fresh, smartly prepared dishes that are not calorically trumped up. Thai mussels in ginger/lemongrass broth hit the mark. Excellent pasta dishes, headlined by justifiably famous Seafood Pasta in white wine sauce, filled with mussels, clams and shrimp over linguine with fresh tomatoes and spinach. Stuffed ravioli with sun-dried tomatoes and mozzarella is beautifully done. Sensibly priced wine list, with a knowing nod to local vintages. Entrees, $12.95-$19.95. Rt. 25, Mattituck Plaza, Mattituck. 298-4000. (Bradbrook, 7/28/01). [F, Mu]

Ile de Beaute. In a beautiful old house with courtyard tables, the spirit of Provence is alive in Greenport with highly authentic French cuisine. Its treatment of classics like escargots, French onion soup, and frogs' legs runs the gamut from superb to extraordinary. Rack of lamb, served with rosemary sauce reduction, is masterly. Desserts are tasty and the crepe options are best expressed in exponential notation. Service is deliberate but attentive. Entrees $24-35. 314 Main Street, Greenport. (Bradbrook, 7/12/02). [Cou,Cr,E]

La Cuvee Wine Bar & Bistro at the Greenporter Hotel. Gourmet bistro dining adjoining a hip boutique hotel footsteps from Greenport's vibrant downtown. The casually upscale dining room creates a pleasing environment for a light and adventurous menu. Seafood appetizers like tuna tartar and the sublime mussels in coconut and lemongrass broth bear an unmistakable Asian influence. But executive chef / owner Deborah Rivera's culinary artistry really announces itself when the entrees arrive. Long Island duck in an orange-infused coconut sauce is impressive enough, but topped by her otherworldly Chilean Sea Bass poached in a miso-sesame broth. Exceptional wine list, with by-the-glass offering many pleasant surprises. Entrees, $21-$26. 326 Front Street, Greenport. 477-0066. (Bradbrook, 4/25/03). [B,Wi]

Red Door. Red Alert! Stephan Mazzella, formerly of Lespinasse, has opened a fine new restaurant in Mattituck. His menu is quite versatile and his consistently tasty dishes excite the palate. Typically adventurous and successful is the pan-seared monkfish with a yellow tomato sauce and black olive purée topped by crispy fried leeks. Mazzella's treatment of fish epitomizes Greek and Italian-style preparation at its best. The appetizer of heirloom tomatoes with boccocini mozzarella and fresh basil and balsamic vinegar is a tomato dish for the ages. Innovative desserts, too. Entrees – $16–$28. 13560 Main Rd., Mattituck. 298-4800. (Bradbrook, 6/14/02). [D]

Ross' Rotisserie and Smokehouse. A casual, homey eat-in or take-out spot opened by John Ross, former chef/owner of Ross' North Fork Restaurant. Great rotisserie and crispy fried chicken; marinated, honey-glazed duck legs; hickory-smoked spareribs; homemade soups and chowders; many cooked-from-scratch side dishes. Every Friday fish fry is an excellent value. A special 6-pound LI duck, cooked crisp, boned and quartered, accompanied by duck sauce and a garnish of apricots and cranberries ($19.99) is available by reservation the day before. Open 7 days 12-8. Route 48, Southold, 765-9655. (Simm, 10/5/01). [So,T]

The Seafood Barge. The North Fork restaurant for fish lovers. Owner/manager team of Dick Ehrlich and Betsey Flinn are as fanatical about results as Steinbrenner/Torre. Newly imported executive chef Michael Meehan updates the menu's standards and introduces several of his own specialties. Vichyssoise spiked with crab meat and basil oil was a rousing success. Marinated baby octopus with baby spinach was succulent and tender. As for the fish, the sushi appetizer continues to be stellar. The pan-seared striped bass with a red pepper broth is a revelation. Desserts are sensational. Excellent wine list, particularly local vintages. Entrees $24-$32. Port of Egypt Marina, Rt. 25, Southold. 765-3010. (Bradbrook, 7/26/02). [Lo,Se,Su]

The Shady Lady Restaurant. The Zorn family's vision of stately elegance comes to the North Fork in this grandly unique dining room. Two rooms actually, with dinner jackets de rigueur in the Scarlet Room and a more casual ambience pervading the lodge-like Pine Room. The menu keeps apace with the opulence of the surroundings. Chef Ross Essner's cosmopolitan cooking style is globally savvy, but local-ingredient particular. Especially breathtaking is the lobster risotto with diver scallop and asparagus. A superb cheese plate complements the dessert choices and the wines are as excellently-chosen as they are reasonably-priced. 305 North Road, Greenport. 477-4500. Entrees, $28-$38. (Bradbrook, 7/18/03). [A,Cu,Ser,Spe,W]

Touch of Venice. Top-notch Italian cuisine in a delightful setting on Mattituck Inlet. Named appropriately for location, cuisine and a large mural dominating the dining room, this is family dining par excellence with a sophisticated ambience. Among the kitchen's highlights: Orient Point oysters, chilled but not icy; baby spinach salad with gorgonzola; black angus porterhouse. Manicotti in a fresh, simple tomato sauce is among the many pleasing pasta dishes. Lobster Meat over angel hair pasta, a frequent special, is an exciting dish of imaginative complexity and one of the North Fork's perennial favorites. Cold seafood bruschetta is another special to watch for. Entrees $16-$34. Wickham Avenue at Matt-A-Mar Marina, Mattituck. 298-5851. (Bradbrook, 8/16/02). [L,O] applies to many of life's situations, it certainly is true of a fine meal. The pace of the meal was gracious and relaxed allowing us plenty of time to talk and catch up. The wait staff was always available to serve our needs, but didn't hover.

And although we were all decidedly too full for dessert, we had them anyway. The guys both ordered the raspberry creme brulee (I didn't know that real men ate creme brulee!) while Karen opted for the dulce de leche filled crepes with fresh berries and cream. Wow! I, however, once again (at least in my opinion) did the best with the molten Godiva chocolate cake served with Tahitian vanilla bean ice cream. Out of this world!

If you are not yet convinced that Red Door should certainly be on your "To Do" list, how's this: on Sunday, Monday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings, Stephan is offering a prix fixe dinner. Soup or salad, entree, and coffee or tea for $22.95. That is a bargain. And with Chef Stephan's philosophy that "we try to accommodate any and all requests," it is no wonder that Red Door is recognized as one of the North Fork's consummate eateries.

–Jolie Trueman-Honey

Red Door is open for dinner every day but Tuesday. Appetizers priced from $8 to 12, salads from $7 to 11, dinner pastas from $17 to 21 and entrees from $19 to 28. Reservations are suggested. 631 298-4800.

Dan's Papers THANKSGIVING GUIDE

Learning By Giving, At School

Last week, we learned of a lovely story that represents hope, camaraderie and compassion. This is just one example of how a little initiative and a lot of hard work and support can make a difference in the world.

It started with a chance meeting on a return flight from London. Ally Stewart, whose husband Captain Jimmy Stewart is serving in Iraq, sat next to seventh grader Freddy Havemeyer and his mother, Ceal, of Southampton. During the flight they discussed the problems in the Middle East, particularly the terrible school conditions in Iraq. Upon landing, they exchanged e-mails and thus put into motion a plan to collect school supplies and ship them over to teachers and students in need.

Ally, in Colorado, created, along with her husband and his Commanding Officer in Iraq, a line of communication with Mrs. Havemeyer and local Southampton school teachers and administrators. They discussed the lack of even the most basic educational materials in the suburbs of Bahgdad, and focused on ways of meeting these needs. Before they knew it, the project created a buzz and captured the attention and motivation of many who wanted to join in this cause. Twelve year-old Freddy never realized how quickly the project would ignite interest and support, but knew he wanted to get his school involved.

The Southampton School district is sending school supplies to Baghdad via Captain Bennett, the Commander of Alpha Battery 3/29. He has been responsible for repairing broken down school buildings and aiding in the organization of this project. "Most of these schools don't even have pens and paper," he explains.

Office Depot enthusiastically responded by donating 1,000 chalkboards. Many other companies, such as Stevenson's Toys in Southampton, have also jumped aboard.

At Southampton Elementary School, Gwen Arnzen involved students, encouraging them to make posters that list all the supplies that are needed. At the Intermediate School, Ms. Lissenden posted the information in the front hall, and the Student Council has been spreading the word to the student body.

This wonderful, humanitarian, collaborative effort has united the school community into action but there is much more to be done. If you would like to take part, please contact the following schools:

EAST END KIDS

International Children's Television Festival

I've decided. When I grow up I want to be a television broadcaster or mogul. Yes, you have to work hard and maybe have to be at work in the middle of the night but you also get invited to all those private screenings and parties. I had my first taste, literally and figuratively at the "Children's Day" kick-off of the International Children's Television Festival at the Museum of Television and Radio on West 52 St. in New York City. There were lots of TV people and their kids at the event, but I had something over them. My mom and dad were actually married in the auditorium of the Museum, actually the former building, with the reception in the museum, and a video roasting of their lives prepared by their friends at NBC. Now how cool or

(L) Neal Shapiro (Pres. of NBC News), Wife JuJu & son Jared
(R) Katlean de Monchy and Emily Post

weird is that? Anyway I went along with Mom and God-Mom, WCBS's Cindy Hsu, and had a ball. There were favorites from TV – the kind I watch – there to entertain the kids. They are much bigger in real life, especially Clifford the Big Red Dog. They had videos in one room, food (yummy!) in another room, crafts in another room, and the list and the rooms went on. So as the parents talked shop, we kids had fun. There is a whole month of activities during the Festival, which has an international flavor because it is in conjunction with the United Nations. There will be screenings from all over the world for kids of course, and performances from storytellers, flamenco dancers, puppet shows and more. –Emily Hart Post

Shop 'til You Drop... With Maria Tennariello

The holidays are right around the corner and it's the time of the year where families and friends spend quality time together. Even though the hustle and bustle tires everyone, it's a favorite time of the year for most. The shops are gearing toward their holiday gift sales, so let's go shopping!

Christian K. Andrews, Bridgehampton

In Westhampton Beach at O'Suzanna on Main Street, if you are a local business person, all you have to do is show Suzanne your business card and you will get a 10% discount on your purchase. This offer is good until December 31, and not used on sale items.

Ho, ho, ho, do I have a scoop for you! The famous "Murphdog" and "Friends" including the "Mardi Gras" will be ready for the holiday season. If you've seen Mikey, the original Murphdog, you won't believe your eyes when I tell you there are almost a dozen of his clones that will be ready to go in December...just in time to stuff those little stockings over the fireplace. They weigh full-grown no more than three to six pounds. Leslie Ernst, our Display Sales Director will be first on line. Call Jenna at Harley's Angel's, 631-723-2253, for information and a sneak preview. Or email Jenna at HarleysAngels@optonline.net

Christian K. Andrews on Jobs Lane in Southampton is having a "Moving Sale". They are moving to #7 Tradesman Path off Butter Lane in Bridgehampton. There are good buys here, so get moving...

Don't pass up Charos Custom Audio/Video on Cameron Street in Southampton. They are doing a "Super Sale" on selected merchandise. Good timing with the holidays right around the corner.

I've said it before and I'll say it again, Casual Home on County Road 39 in Southampton is having a "Select Furniture and Accessories" sale going on right now. Now is the time to fill in after you've thrown out! Lots of mirrors, entertainment units, desks, chairs, tables and more here to choose from. The early bird always catches the worm!

Next door at Windows & Walls Unlimited they are discounting the Hunter Douglas window fashions 65%. Say hi to Linda and Paul and tell them that I sent you...

I stopped at Payless in the Bridgehampton Commons and found a great sale going on. Buy one of anything in the store and get another at half price...So of course, I walked out with a bag full of merchandise...and I saved a bundle. Also, Payless is open for business on Thanksgiving Day, just in case you need a pair of boots or accessories. I'm sure Star Jones knows about that!

Right next door at Rite Aid Pharmacy, you can always find a bargain. All their holiday merchandise is on the shelves and some of it is up to 50% off. I found lot's of new nail polishes in holiday colors by Sally Hansen (my favorite nail polish – it never comes off).

Oh Dasher, Oh Dancer, Oh Prancer, Oh sales! You can save 20% off on all Christmas lights, 3D wire sculptures, extension cords and gutter clips at Treasure Island on Montauk Highway at the Wainscott Village. Wow! Everything you ever needed to buy for Christmas at very affordable prices. Gift wrap and ribbons to make your presents presentable, faux Christmas flowers and baskets to enchant your guests, wreaths, music boxes, fiber optic and pre-lit trees, icicle lights, net lights and so much more. There are special savings on special trees that will make your Christmas holiday brighter.

Don't miss the every Saturday sale at Buglar USA, Inc.'s warehouse at five Hardscabble Court (Unit 4) in East Hampton. The time is 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and the warehouse is filled to the rafters with great-discontinued pottery and discontinuing merchandise, all in perfect condition. I found a 15-piece tea set priced at $40 and oversized double handled soup cups for only $2. Also in the mix are a limited remainder of Moroccan home furnishings that include hand-painted hexagonal tables, dressers, henna lamps, and so much more. Can't beat those prices. You better get going because the merchandise is flying out the door.

London Jewelers on Main Street in East Hampton has an interesting way to say you care...with their silver gallery charms that definitely say I love you, for $50 and up. What a great stocking stuffer!

Time to get going to meet John at Gin Lane in Water Mill for dinner. After dinner on Friday evenings you can dance to the red-hot music by the Lone Sharks. I get that shark attack every Friday night! See you there...

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Holiday Shopping!

Classic Cars with Bob Gelber

Certain automotive sounds bring back memories of cars I have owned or driven. All of the vintage English sports cars have electric fuel pumps. When starting cold, the normal procedure is to turn on the ignition key and listen for the rapid clickety-click of the fuel pump. When the clickety-click slows and finally stops, the car is ready to start. You usually have to pump the gas pedal several times, sometimes hearing a squish-squish sound coming from under the bonnet. Hood, actually, but we're talking British cars here, chaps. If you are lucky that day, your car will start. Many times it will not. Legions of car owners have switched their British made SU electric fuel pumps for American Stewart-Warner models.

1950s and '60s British cars all have the most wonderful manual transmissions. The shifter is usually directly on top of the transmission, so there is very little free play. If you listen carefully, you can hear a snick-snick as you go from gear to gear. Because there is little soundproofing on the transmission tunnels of these cars, gear whine in the lower gears is sometimes pronounced. Lots of drivers complain about this calliopean of mechanical sounds, but to me it's music. Combine all of this with an after market sport exhaust, perhaps an Abarth or Peco, and you are driving a highway symphony.

The best sounding exhaust system of the early sports cars is on the 1950 series XK-120 Jaguars. It has to be an M model, with the high compression cylinder head and tandem dual exhaust. Nobody, but nobody, did those earlier exhaust sounds better than Jaguar except, of course, Ferrari.

In the fifties, Ferrari and Jaguar were fierce competitors on the racetracks of the world. LeMans was their playground and war zone. At night, even without seeing the cars, you could identify them by the bellow of their exhaust. The V-12 powered street Ferraris all had the same distinctive sound. It's a cliche to say that at high revs a Ferrari sounds like ripping linen, but the truth of the matter is that it really does sound like abused fabric. No other car in the world can make this claim, and frankly, the older the Ferrari, the better it sounds.

The old four cylinder Porsches which, sadly, were out of production after '67, have a unique sound. Notice that I said unique, not pleasant. Truth be told, it is hard to get a good sound out of those old four bangers. I had several 356s, loved every one of them, but tried everything to extract a good exhaust rap out of them. Nothing worked. I have always felt it has to do with the extremely short exhaust system. You see, with the rear engine, there is no long pipe to resonate sound. Anyway, the most memorable sound of an old Porsche is the mechanical hum of that giant cooling fan whirling about, just behind your head. It's always fun to whoosh up and down the gearbox, even though it has one of the sloppiest shifters ever put into a world class sports car.

Big American V-8s. Now these dreadnoughts really produce noise, from solid lifters that sound like there is something amiss inside the engine, to straight-through exhaust or Cherry Bomb mufflers. Sounds are their business. One has only to stand next to a seriously modified Chevy big block and listen to it spit and cough through its Holly Double Pumpers to know that something huge is going on inside this piece of iron. The lumpity-lump, lumpity-lump idle that is shaking the ground seems to be whispering, "Stand back, baby, I'm going to blow." Seriously hot, big motors actually scare onlookers with their sounds. And don't forget the odor of a big block. It always reeks of excess gas fumes. A big block eats fuel like it eats quarter miles. OPEC dream cars.

Cars being built today aren't as unique when it comes to sounds. True, Ferraris still wail, and the new Porsches finally have the exhaust whoosh just right. The Honda S2000 carries the flame at 8,000 RPM, but most cars are built to give quiet rides. Every car now has air conditioning and killer-diller sound systems that could puncture the eardrums of a rock star. Drivers today would rather hear music than gearbox, engine or exhaust sounds. But if you're like me, and you know who YOU are, you find the mechanical sounds of machinery a music unto itself, something to be appreciated and enjoyed. Especially if what you hear emanates from a car with the correct sounds.

There is still some hope for us car noise addicts. That's the reason you are seeing fat boy exhaust tips. That's the added bonus of the supercharged rice rockets. It's called turbo whine and boost valve blow off. There is also the pitter-patter that only low profile sticky rubber makes on pavement.

In the mainstream car world nowadays, the loudest noise one usually hears is the CD changer flipping over another disc. Sometimes the sounds of silence can be deafening to the die hard auto buff. Give me a throaty blatttt, a muffled roar or an occasional tire squeal anytime.

When In Manhattan...

Dr. John Conjures Life Into Times Square

Most of us remember the days when Times Square was wonderfully debaucherous. The streets were rife with homelessness, sex shops, crime, and souvenir merchants peddling questionably legal wares such as switchblades and hot Rolex watches. Back then, the only sense of order was the prominently placed Armed Forces Registration booth for the downtrodden, and the occasional policeman to make you empty your beer and throw out the paper bag. Today it's more like Metro-Disney. However, this weekend a taste of life and reality can be had again. Mac Rebannack, a.k.a Dr. John, will be playing four shows at the B.B. King Blues Bar and Grill, located at 237 West 42nd Street between 7th and 8th Aves.

Dr. John, who now resides here in the Hamptons with his wife Cat, is the real deal. As one of New Orleans' most distinctive voices, alongside Louis Armstrong and Fats Domino, the gravelly sound of Dr. John's singing is unmistakable and unforgettable. He's most known for the top-twenty classic, Right Place, Wrong Time, played with the Meters, which comes from his aptly titled hit 1973 album, In the Right Place. But the Good Doctor's career didn't stop there. Far be it for him to appear on an episode of VH1's Where Are They Now? The Night Tripper from the Crescent City furthered his appeal and grabbed a Grammy award for Makin' Whoopie, his moody duet with Rickie Lee Jones, in 1989, then secured a second in 1992, with his album, Goin' Back to New Orleans.

Rebannack's story is more suited for Behind the Music. Growing up in 1950s New Orleans, the man who would later name himself Dr. John had played session guitar and recorded an album of original songs by the age of 16. He was forced to take up the piano when his finger was nearly shot off while he was breaking up a fight. In true rock n' roll style, Rebannack ran with a myriad of shady characters in the music and drug scene. He disposed of fetuses for an abortionist, was a stickup man, near murderer, pickpocket, and relentless addict. In 1962, his ways landed him in prison for two years, and he emerged, complete with feathered headdress, as his psychedelic voodoo guru persona: Dr. John Creaux – named for a 19th century voodoo conjurer.

Dr. John

With his new presence, fantastic stage show complete with snake handling and black magic (eat your heart out Alice Cooper), and brilliant music, Dr. John was soon a hot commodity. All the big shots of the day, including Mick Jagger, Eric Clapton, Bob Dylan, and Van Morrison, either asked to be on Dr. John's album, or invited him to spice up theirs. Most recently, in 2000, Dr. John released Creole Moon, his third record from Parlophone, whom he signed with in 1997. He has recorded over 35 albums.

The B.B. King Blues Club and Grill is close to Penn Station, and hosts an excellent space for this show. The décor is classic blues bar, and the stage, while not small, provides a sense of intimacy with its close proximity to the dimly lit booths and tables. For the cocktail oriented, the 40-foot bar provides plenty of room for you to enjoy the music and suck down a couple of Zombies to help invoke the spirit of the Big Easy.

Dr. John is playing Friday November 21st and Saturday November 22nd at 8 and 10:30 p.m., at the B.B. King Blues Bar & Grill. Call the box office or go to www.ticketmaster.com for tickets.

Boston Bound

With the holiday season upon us, thoughts turn to bringing friends and family together. For those with family living in New York City, there is the Hampton Jitney, probably the most comfortable way to travel out to the East End. The buses have hosts and/or hostesses, beverage service and food service and reading material available on board. There is also a bathroom on board.

Now the Jitney offers round trip service back and forth to Boston with the same sort of attended service, something that is particularly convenient for people who have children at college there. The buses leave at 8 a.m. from the Southampton Omni on Fridays, Saturdays, Sundays and Mondays every week, and arrive in downtown Boston at 1:45 p.m. The reverse trip leaves from the Copley Square in Boston at 3 p.m., and arrives in Southampton, also six hours later, at 9:20 p.m.

Currently, there are a number of other ways to get from the East End to Boston, but none offer the combination of speed, comfort, simplicity and price that this service does. You arrive in Southampton by car, go to the bus stop and stow your luggage in the cargo bay, find yourself one of the comfortable seats, and you're off. In about an hour and fifteen minutes, you arrive at the ferry crossing Long Island Sound, disembark to the passenger cabin to enjoy the water view, the snack bar, a TV lounge or a stroll around the deck and then you arrive in Bridgeport an hour and a half later, return to your seat on the bus and continue on your way. You can read, nap, see the sights or do paperwork. The Jitney driver does all the work.

The cost one way is $59 which includes the ferry ride. Round trip is $98. The Jitney makes stops in Hampton Bays, Bellport and Farmingville before it crosses on the ferry to Connecticut at Port Jefferson to Bridgeport. There are no other stops in New England until you get to Boston.

This is a great service for your college student during the holidays, and for you on family day visits after that.

Away At School... By David Lion Rattiner

War

I have not been on this planet for all that long, but as far as I can tell, war works basically like this. First off, you need different countries with different looking people, cultures, religions, languages, and resources. Inside of these countries you need to have some kind of business going on, using the resources that the country has. For example, Ireland is rich in potatoes, so they have a lot of potato farmers. Of course, these countries all need a military to protect the things that they do business with and the people that live there from evil invaders, or just bad people in general, or even aliens. I mean, you never know. So they make militaries for that. After that, you get a unique looking flag, a song about your country and how great it is and of course, you need a leader of this country, who has an absolutely ridiculous amount of power, no matter how you look at it.

Now you are missing just one ingredient for war – a problem. Generally, the problems are either the country is angry that another country worships God differently, a country gets jealous of another country's resources, or more simply, the leader of the country is completely out of his mind insane.

A decision is made by somebody and then boom, you got yourself a war.

At first, when the decision for war is made, just about everyone in the country is initially excited that they are going to war. I mean in a way, war is kind of cool, right? There are all of those explosions, all of the stories that our grandparents tell us about and how awful it was, but in a way, we are kind of jealous that they got to experience it. There is all that drama, all of the country colors that we are used to seeing, the movies, all of the big soldiers and their big guns and their big chins. Everyone is brave, we are invincible, no one can touch us, and no one can hurt us. How dare they. Who do they think they are messing with us? Are they crazy? We are going to war right now, we are not messing around, this is a matter of honor. God is on our side; other countries are on our side. Go get 'em, hunt them down and damn it bury them, all of them. KILL THEM. Better you than me. They, them, those bastards, those people, those terrible people, what about the children? They are so stupid, so stupid, they need to live better. Who cares? Idiots. The government loves you right now. Shoot them like they do in the movies, fire missiles, Roger that, ten four, over and out, I'm going in, get out there and do your stuff, go, go, go.

We feel good about it at first, yes, of course we do. We are striking back and retaliating and at the same time we are doing them a favor they just don't know it. Then of course time goes by and people start dying. A lot of people start dying. Hundreds of people, thousands of people even. When this starts to happen, we start to think twice about the whole war thing and whether or not it was smart to go to war or whether or not it was stupid.

Depending on which war you are talking about, you will either say, yes people are dying but we have to continue fighting because if we stop fighting we will most certainly be killed, or many other people will continue to be killed no matter what. It is either fight or die. It is either fight them or let them take you over and kill you or make you a slave. It is either fight them or watch them kill your brother and rape your sister. It is either fight them and let one country have all the resources, not through fair trade, but by force. They have your potatoes because you let them take them.

Depending on which war you are talking about, you will either say just kill them or you will say what are we really trying to accomplish here? Do we really need to be fighting them? If we just left, would anything change? If we left, less people would die, isn't that the goal? Less death? If we left last week, the guys that died last week would still be alive.

War is so bad, it's the only time it's okay to kill people. Congratulations, you are a mass murderer, kill as much as you like. War should be a board game with few rules played by the country leaders. Killing someone should be a bad thing. You should only be allowed to kill someone if they are trying to kill you or someone in your family. Killing random people is bad in my opinion.

I hate war. I hate, hate, hate war. I want to go to war with war. I wish there was no war. I wish people were not so stupid. I wish war wasn't interesting. I wish war was like watching golf. I wish all people agreed that war was stupid and they gave each other a hug. I wish people liked it when other people are different. I wish that guns were useless. I wish that war was just a card game. I wish people weren't still dying from war.

ART COMMENTARY With Marion Wolberg Weiss

"THE AMBIGUOUS TOY" AT GUILD HALL

There's creativity afoot at Guild's Hall current exhibit, or should we say multiple exhibits. Curator Christina Strassfield has cleverly combined a conceptual art presentation with more "traditional" works in shows by Gerson Leiber, Darius Yektai and Warren Whipple.

The result? There's something for everyone, although to be perfectly honest, yours truly is particularly delighted at the intriguing materials and modes served by "The Ambiguous Toy": the recurring dolls and guns motif and the Surrealism that they evoke. But mostly messages, often political, distinguish this exhibit, bringing it closer to the edgy conceptualism we expect from the Manhattan gallery scene.

How does this conceptualism work? In this case, it's a matter of theme contradicting form. For example, dolls and doll-like children do not signify the usual traits of innocence and purity. They can be grotesque, evil or dangerous. Consider Christa Maiwald's photographs featuring potraits of children with guns. Conventional symbols have been subverted to signify opposition, recalling examples from horror films. (Children as murderers like the movie Damien.) Ms. Maiwald's penchant for anti-violence is a continuing commitment, seen first in her 1970s videos.

Dolls connoting comfort are used in Irwin Perton's installation but as voodoo objects, a similar twist on conventional symbols. Children (along with other family members) are also given a negative meaning in Helen Kutash's interactive "Family Relations," another installation which invites viewers to write their feelings on sculptural family figures.

Rocco Liccardi's plastic dolls are given a similar slant in this context when he labels his objects "alien." Again, dolls are dangerous and threatening.

Not all the conceptual works use dolls as contradiction, of course. There's Christine Najdzionek's box construction, "The Quest" presenting myth as somewhat scary (the Queen has an animal body). The artist also implies that romantic relationships are not what they appear to be, a frightening idea for sure.

Other contradictions abound. Robert Richenburg's anti -war work employs plastic toy soldiers (death) as stems in a plant (life). It's decidedly different and powerfully simple. The piece's design, with bodies placed in varied positions, recalls for this critic similar metaphorical footpaths seen in some of the artist's abstract expressionistic paintings.

Finally, there's Lawrence Hagarty's installation which surely requires a background in Freud and literature to interpret. No matter. The challenge this piece presents is invigorating. For example, the toy pig signifies Soviet theorist Bakhtin's writings about pigs and the Catholic clergy sharing traits.

This need for reference points is an additional quality suggested by conceptual art. (Thanks to Mr. Hagarty for an explanation of his work.) We'll have to wait for another conceptual show to pursue this topic in depth.

The current exhibits will be on view at East Hampton's Guild Hall until early January, 2004.

HONORING THE ARTIST: MICA MCCANN

It's not often that a relatively brief interview, sometimes by phone, can go beyond the normal "what, when and where." Talking with this week's cover artist, Mica McCann, was an exception, however. It was more like a conversation between friends.

A large part of this was due to Ms. McCann's likeable and unpretentious demeanor. Her desire for knowledge, and to learn about other people, was revealed, as she asked as many questions as she was asked.

It seems that this curiosity is one of Ms. McCann's most enduring traits, leading her to pursue any number of professional paths. Some roads have crisscrossed throughout her life, relating to art as well as human services and nature. She notes succinctly that "I've always loved art; I come from a family of musicians and artists." Her daughter is a video artist.

While Ms. McCann studied art in college, she moved to Manhattan the day after she graduated, taking a job as a social worker. She still lives there, with her husband, this time in the West Village, which she finds very energizing.

"When I was about nine years old, my family took me to New York for some event, and I announced that 'I'm going to live there someday,'" she explains with a small laugh. "And, of course, there weren't many art jobs. I worked at a welfare agency for four or five years with foster children. The issues on the TV show Judging Amy are realistic. Things are the same today," she adds when asked if foster care has changed in the interim.

But Ms. McCann's love of art took precedence after all. She left social work, explaining that "Making a product is what I wanted to do. You're done with it when it's finished. You can be in control." Ms. McCann started designing jewelry after a friend gave her some wax and encouraged her to give it a try.

Once more, curiosity motivated Ms. McCann to try a different kind of career. It was a smart move leading to the formation of her own company with clients like Bloomingdale's and Henry Bendel. "I got to the point, however, that I wanted to know about the production aspects of jewelry design," she says. "I went 'inside' working with other companies, learning more advanced techniques and how to set and polish stones. I also traveled a lot to places like Hong Kong, China and Frankfurt to buy stones and supervise cutting."

A recent foray along another career path has led Ms. McCann to Bronx's Botanical Gardens where she is learning about botanical drawings. Such a program reinforces her penchant for nature, generally, and her garden in Cutchoque, particularly, where she and her

ENTERTAINMENT IN THE HAMPTONS

Take Five 2003

with Jan Silver

There are many classical music performances and literary speakers in these parts this weekend. Bay Street Theatre has its Young Playwrights Program, and this is the last weekend to catch two good community theater productions. There are foreign films at local cultural venues, and Amagansett's Stephen Talkhouse continues its unusual programming this week with burlesque and comedy on Friday and an all-male revue next Wednesday. For details on the above, see below.

THEATER

Bay Street Theatre is into its 11th year of working in the community with its Young Playwrights Program. Bay Street artists go into the local high schools to give a seven-week acting and writing workshop which culminates this weekend with six short plays written, produced and starring the students. Performances are Friday at noon and Saturday at 7 p.m. Reserve tickets ($10) by calling the box office at 631-725-9500.

This is the last weekend to see the Vail-Leavitt Theatre Company's highly dramatic production of John Pielemeier's Agnes of God at the John Drew Theater, Guild Hall, East Hampton. Performances are Friday through Sunday evenings; call the box office at 631-324-4050 for tickets ($15-18).

The Southampton Players' gutsy production of the Stephen Sondheim/George Furth musical Company is onstage at the Avram Theater, Southampton College, only this Friday through Sunday evening. The show starts at 8 p.m. and tickets ($15 adults, $10 students) are available at the door.

MUSIC

East Hampton's Ross School faculty musicians present an evening of contemporary classical music, including works by Bartok and Villa-Lobos, Friday at 7 p.m. Tickets are $20 for guests, $10 for faculty and $5 for students; call the school at 631-907-5555 to reserve a seat.

Dr. Jasmin Cowin will present a musical lecture on the great classical piano concertos Saturday, 2 p.m., in the Quogue Library. There is no charge but please call to register at 731-653-4224.

The Southampton Cultural Center's piano concert series continues on Saturday, 7 p.m., with a performance by Pianofest participant Natalia Lavrova. The Russian-born Ms. Lavrova studied at the Moscow Conservatory and is currently a master's degree student at Juilliard. Tickets are $15 for adults, $10 for students and seniors; seating is limited, so please call 631-287-4377 to reserve space.

Sunday at 3 p.m. in the Morris Meeting Room of Southampton's Rogers Memorial Library, Solo Noi Tre will give a concert. The trio (soprano Justine Tietjen, baritone Gary Lorentzson, pianist Kenneth Friese) will perform some well-loved opera arias and favorite songs from classic Broadway musicals. There is no admission charge but seating is limited; call 631-283-0774 ext. 523 for seats.

Music at local clubs and restaurants this week: Amagansett's Stephen Talkhouse – comedian Murray Hill's burlesque show (Fri.), Nancy Atlas (Sat.), All-Male Revue (next Wed.); East Hampton – Jane Hastay/Peter Martin Weiss (Fri.) and Todd Michaels (Sat.) at Maidstone Arms; piano bar weekends at Mary Jane's; Wainscott – music at Rubi Red; Sag Harbor – Hunky Page on piano at American Hotel; Andy Boracci at Spinnaker's (Sat.); Bridgehampton – Kipling's Trio play soft jazz and pop classics weekends; hot & cool jazz with Stefanie Cardinali group Sun. brunch at World Pie, Sun. eve at Pierre's; Water Mill – Lone Sharks (Fri.) at Gin Lane; Southampton – good musicians at Belle's East; East Quogue – music weekends at New Moon Café.

FILMS

Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center's "World Cinema" series feature is The Flower of Evil (French with subtitles) this Friday through Sunday. Tickets are $10 adults, $7 students and seniors, $3 Film Society members. There are several screening times, so check the schedule at 631-288-1500 or online at www.whbpac.org.

The critically-acclaimed New Zealand family drama Whale Rider (PG-13) will be shown at Sag Harbor's John Jermain library this Friday, 6:30 p.m. There is no admission charge but please call 631-725-0049 to reserve a seat.

SPEAKERS

The Artists Alliance of East Hampton presents "The Writing Process: Six Esteemed Authors Share Their Experiences" this Saturday, 2 p.m. at Guild Hall. The featured writers are Blanche Wiesen Cook, Frank McCourt, Emily Prager, Harvey Shapiro, Lanford Wilson and Hilma Wolitzer. Admission is $5 and a reception follows the discussion.

Four authors published in the latest issue of the literary journal Hamptons Shorts will read upstairs at BookHampton, East Hampton, on Saturday at 5:30 p.m. Poet Louis Simpson reads from his collection Owner of the House at Canio's Books, Sag Harbor, on Sunday at 3 p.m.

theatre review: Six Dance Lessons In Six Weeks... by Jan Silver

This Richard Alfieri comedy, which opened at the Belasco Theatre in October, is a touching tale of two lonely, mismatched people who, despite all their differences, forge a loving friendship. Although the playwright gives his two characters somewhat cliched pasts, Polly Bergen makes Lily Harrison always believable and a viewer does care about Mark Hamill's Michael Minetti by the second act.

Lily is a Southern Baptist minister's widow and retired teacher living in an attractive 14th floor Gulf-front condo in St. Petersburg Beach, Florida. She is spunky but bored with her inconsequential life, so she decides to take private ballroom dancing lessons at home. The dance studio sends over a hyper, over-the-top instructor.

Hamill's Minetti is in his 40s and gay, a former Broadway dancer who returned to Florida to nurse his dying mother. In their initial meeting, he calls himself "a passive/aggressive queen with a bad attitude" and Lily "an old, tight-assed biddy." She is appalled, but he needs the job, she needs a diversion, he needs the job, and their relationship goes on from there.

The play is structured in two acts with each scene introducing another social dance, from swing to tango to cha-cha, etc. The music is enjoyable and it is instantly recognizable, starting with the Andrews Sisters' recording of "Bei Mir Bist Du Schon." This set-up may not appeal to theatergoers under 30, but real emotions everyone experiences underlie these two people's lives.

Polly Bergen is humorous and touching as Lily. Her wonderfully mobile face registers Lily's thoughts and she is quite fetching in Helen Butler's choice of Florida-colorful outfits that look like they come from the better-dress department of Burdine's. Mark Hamill, who originated the role of Luke Skywalker in Star Wars, has been an active film and theater actor since then. He is almost manic in his opening scenes here, but this is perhaps how someone (actor? playwright? director?) sees this character at first.

Arthur Allan Seidelman directs the play at a brisk pace. Roy Christopher's apartment design is handsome, and Tom Ruzika's lighting of the Gulf of Mexico as seen through Lily's windows is very dramatic, often foreshadowing what will happen onstage. Philip G. Allen's sound design smoothly integrates the dance recordings and live dialogue, and Kay Cole's choreography is inviting.

Richard Alfieri is a screenwriter as well as a playwright. He is adapting Six Dance Lessons... for Universal Pictures, but it is quite delightful as a play. Performances are Tuesday through Saturday evenings with matinees on Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday at the Belasco Theatre, 111 West 44 Street. Tickets are available at www.telecharge.com (212-239-6200 or 800-432-7250) with special rates for seniors.

DFN Gallery in Manhattan hosted the opening of a two person show on Wednesday featuring the work of Cornelia Foss and Alfonse Borysewicz. This well attended opening looked like a Who's Who of Hamptons artists who turned out to honor Cornelia Foss. The juxtaposition of Boryswicz' new abstract paintings with Foss, paintings of landscape, seascape, and portraits gave an interesting range to the show. Cornelia Foss surprises us with a new series of portraits including her husband, composer Lukas Foss, daughter and actress, Eliza Foss, grand-daughter Sabina Foss Topol, playwright John Guare, film director Anthoney Harvey, writer James Salter, poet Kenneth Koch, and many others.

Elf & Love Actually

With due respect and sincere seasonal apologies to Charles Dickens and Frank Capra, Christmas and movies go together like Hum and Bug. The exploitive combination usually adds up to just that. The humbuggery of a dextrose-loaded injection of Christmas into a film is done hoping to produce a king's ransom – with the audience getting "Scrooged" royally. It worked well for Die Hard, an ultra-violent, blood-spattered mess but tinted with the rosy aura of toy Santas and cheerful carols. Now, no sooner than having blown out the candles in the pumpkins, here are the first two of what will be a minor blizzard of sugar-plumbed-to-the-core movies.

Love Actually is in the category of a generic flick given a shot of treacly Christmas nog to fuzzily warm up a coldly calculated, romantic comedy that bludgeons you with a candy cane in a desperate effort to get you to agree that "love is all around" even in the midst of the World Trade Center disaster. That takes cheek and it isn't the kind that make up Santa's jolly face. I'm not sure Santa and Mrs. Claus would enjoy the weaving of a number of love relationships into a lengthy fabrication where the wooly yarns are made up of sexist male strands of puffery. Love Actually is the first directing foray of British screenwriter Richard Curtis, who established a domain of his own with scripts for Bridget Jones Diary, Notting Hill and the admirable Four Weddings and a Funeral. This current, decorous outing might be titled, "Six Affairs and a Burial" since it marks the demise of Mr. Curtis' realm of acerbic British farce, where he reigned as monarch. Now, he has patched a series of TV inspired sit-com sketches and over-drawn drama into contrived, satiny quilts that too easily slip off the naughty beds they adorn.

You can very likely be charmed by the large, excellent cast that includes British and Americans: Alan Rickman, Bill Nighy, Emma Thompson, Laura Linney, Hugh Grant, Liam Neeson and plenty more. They ably slide their way through the arrival gate at Heathrow and into and out of love as facilely as skidding on a banana peel. Falling in love is real easy to do (according to Curtis) and falling out of love and being pushed out of love is equally easy for the boys who tire of their wives and simply find young things infatuated with them enough to pull off their clothing and jump into a pool. Silly sappy stuff is made to seem celestial. After all, it is the Yuletide season.

There's no getting around Elf being a Christmas movie. It takes place in the North Pole and a New York City totally besotted with Radio City Christmas trimmings. And it's not that far removed from Frank Capra's It's A Wonderful Life. Sound as stale and hokey as last Halloween's candy corn? No way, Jose. Noche Buena. It's rather hip and, happily, not one of those aggressive, push your face into the flaming plum pudding morality fairy tale. Saturday Night Live's Will Ferrell has found his best role yet as Buddy, a human kid taken in by Santa's elves who lovingly put up with him even after he's totally grown up out of the elves height requirements. From the pointed top of his hat to the bottom points of his shoes, Ferrell wears green with white fur trim so unselfconsciously, you may be fitted with a smile that will take you days to undo, as he takes his sweet good nature to New York to find his real father who turns out to be a grouchy children's book editor played by a crabby James Caan. New York gives Buddy, the oversized elf, a chance to cover all the compulsory Christmas story bases: the crass commercialization, tolerance, love and equal appeal to young and old. Lovey-dovey is supplied by Zooey Deschanel. Young and old will be served by Ed Asner's Santa and Bob Newhart's Papa Elf and a swell animated sequence by stop-animation veteran Ray Harryhausen. The big stars, however, are Ferrell's interpretation of a very witty script by David Berenbaum. ELF, naturally delivers another Christmas movie boiler plate clause converting a Santa non-believer. It might be you, too.

theatre review: Cat On A Hot Tin Roof... by gordin & christiano

The current revival of Tennessee Williams' Pulitzer Prize winning masterpiece Cat on a Hot Tin Roof, starring Ashley Judd and Jason Patric at Broadway's Music Box, is a major disappointment. Mr. Williams is, of course, one America's finest and most prolific playwrights and this play is one of his favorites. It was first performed on Broadway in 1955 and was subsequently done on film in 1958 with Elizabeth Taylor and Paul Newman. The play itself still resonates today as a complex drama of greed, sexual longing, and isolation. The story is one of Mr. Williams' most passionate statements concerning self delusion, denial and the resulting inability to communicate. Renowned Tony Award-winning British director Anthony Page staged the play in London two years ago, and while his staging here always remains a lush eyeful, it fails to deliver with any sparks from the two leads. The first act, with Ashley Judd as Maggie the Cat thrusting herself at Jason Patric's zombie-like Brick and hurling herself about the stage in what amounts to a gymnastic performance lacking in sensuality, is a tedious bore. The two actors are luscious eye candy indeed, but the chemistry between them is totally non-existent. There is no sexual tension. There is not a moment where you ever believe the two characters ever cared for one another, let alone came together in carnal lust, as the script demands.

The second act confrontation between Ned Beatty's forceful Big Daddy, a self-made man of enormous wealth, and his alcoholic ex-football playing son Brick is the evening's highlight. Mr. Beatty is a consummate actor and after the dismal first act, his performance here is a breath of fresh air. Big Daddy is really dying of cancer, but he has been deceived into believing he is only suffering from a spastic colon. Mr. Beatty gives us a charged up Big Daddy, who is riding the euphoria of one who believes he has cheated death. This Big Daddy is ready to seize life and in the process he draws Mr. Patric out of his numbed-out zone. We finally get glimpses of the tortured soul beneath Brick's drunken façade, as the two men confront life's "mendacities."

There is a program note from the director about the third act, which actually has three versions. The director Elia Kazan asked Mr. Williams to rewrite his darker original. What we get here is a variation on the 1974 adaptation. What is necessary to make this act work is a vulnerable Maggie teaming with lust and determination. Maggie as played by Ashley Judd is just not up to the task.

Michael Mastro and Amy Horn are appropriately obnoxious as the scheming in-laws, but Margo Martindale's sad disillusioned Big Mama is a standout. She is alternately funny and moving as she clings desperately to her belief that Big Daddy is well and truly in love with her.

The costumes by Jane Greenwood are excellent, and the bedroom set designed by the late Maria Bjornson is stunning.

If you would like to see real heat in the leading roles check out the watered down 1958 film with Taylor and Newman and Burl Ives' commanding Big Daddy. Even if the film skirts the issues (the homosexuality is cut out) it does deliver with some fine nuanced sexually charged performances, which are lacking in this current revival.

Cat on a Hot Tin Roof is now playing at The Music Box, 239 West 45th Street. For ticket information: 212-239-6200

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

Every year, around this time, a major concern is how to roast the perfect turkey so that it is golden, crisp and moist, as well as how to juggle the rest of the multi-faceted Thanksgiving feast.

On a recent Wednesday, Evan Waters and Beth Collins, two of East Hampton's Ross School culinary team, partnered to share helpful hints on the techniques of roasting, a technique that is done by dry heat. Roasting time is important and there are guides to be followed. The chefs strongly suggest using a meat thermometer, preferably the instant kind to get an instant and accurate reading.

One of the important techniques taught that evening was how to separate the entire breast, including the wings, from the thigh and leg section. Chef Waters deftly cut through the soft skin on both sides of the breast between the breast and thighs of a beautiful, natural heirloom turkey, separating the two sections. The breast was boned and flattened to stuff with boned out pieces of dark meat, topped with stuffing then rolled and tied as for ballottine, a boned, stuffed and rolled preparation. This was indeed impressive, yet I thought, how clever to be able to roast the two sections and remove the breast before the thigh and leg section which always takes longer to cook.

The USDA guideline for roasting turkey is to roast at 325 degrees. An 8-10 pound for 2 3/4 to 3 hours, 12-14 pounds for 3 to 3 3/4 hours, 14-18 pounds for 3 3/4 to 4 1/2 hours and 18 to 20 pounds for 4 1/4 to 4 1/2 hours. Guidelines vary widely as to the degree of doneness. Some recipes call for roasting the bird to 175 or 180 degrees. I prefer to take the dark meat to 170 degrees and the white meat to 160 degrees. The bird continues to cook after it is removed from the oven with resting time of 15-20 minutes. This gives the cook time to make a light gravy. Reduce a quart of chicken or turkey stock to about one cup (make ahead of time from the turkey giblets with carrots, onion and celery) or purchase a container of demi-glace, an intensely flavorful stock reduction. Deglaze pan drippings from the roasting pan and pour through a fat separator, (like a measuring cup with a long spout) available in cookware shops. Simmer the reduction with the clear pan drippings, season to taste and keep warm.

Then there is the question to brine or not to brine. It is said brining does not work well with a bird more than 12-14 pounds. Marinating a turkey overnight is a simpler process and a successful one. Just remember to prepare all your holiday side dishes a day or two before leaving you time to lovingly baste (a must) and tend your beautifully burnished bird. Have a Happy Thanksgiving.

LEMON AND HERB ROASTED TURKEY.

Infuse the bird under the skin with a savory marinade of fresh herbs.
Serves 10-12

1 14-16 pound fresh turkey
1 tablespoon each fresh rosemary, sage and thyme leaves
1/4 cup fresh lemon juice
1 stick unsalted butter or 1/2 cup extra-virgin olive oil
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
1 quart homemade turkey broth or chicken stock
1/4 cup Bourbon, optional

1. Rinse turkey inside and out with cold water and pat dry with paper towels. Pull wing tips up and tuck between wings and body and place turkey, breast side up, on a rack in a roasting pan. Coarsely chop herb mixture and mix with lemon juice, softened butter or oil and salt and pepper. Massage the turkey with the mixture over and under the skin as well a possible. Refrigerate, covered, with a tent of plastic wrap for 24 hours.

Position rack in lower third of oven. Preheat oven to 325 degrees.

2. Next day bring turkey to room temperature before roasting. Tightly cover the breast area with aluminum foil. Pour 2 cups stock into bottom of roaster and roast, with the legs pointing toward the rear of the oven, basting all over every 20 minutes or so for about 2 hours (lift the foil to reach the breast area).

3. Remove the foil to allow breast skin to brown and roast and baste for about another hour or until Instant thermometer reads 160 degrees in the breast area. Remove from oven and transfer to a cutting board. Allow turkey to rest for at least 20 minutes. If juices run pink in the leg and thigh when carving the turkey, return to pan juices in roasting pan to continue roasting until juices run clear when pierced with the tip of a knife.

4. Place roasting pan over heat, straddling two burners as necessary, and skim off fat. Add remaining stock or broth and Bourbon if using. Reduce over high heat, scraping up drippings in pan to make a natural gravy. Taste for salt and pepper. Keep resulting sauce warm until ready to spoon over carved turkey slices.

CRANBERRY PEAR COMPOTE

Janet Whelan / Postma, friend, neighbor and fine cook shares this delectable do-ahead compote. This simple pleasure is sure to add spark to your traditional Thanksgiving trimmings.
Yield: About 6 cups

4-5 Comice pears of medium ripeness, peeled, cored and chopped
1 12-ounce bag fresh cranberries
1-1 1/2 cups sugar
1/4-1/3 cup apple cider vinegar
Grated peel from one large navel orange
Fresh juice from the orange
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1 tablespoon Grand Marnier Liqueur
1 cup toasted pecans, optional

1. In a heavy saucepan, combine pears, cranberries, sugar, vinegar, orange peel and juice, and cinnamon and bring to a boil. Reduce heat to medium; simmer with cover ajar for 15 minutes, stirring occasionally. When mixture cools down add Grand Marnier and stir to mix.

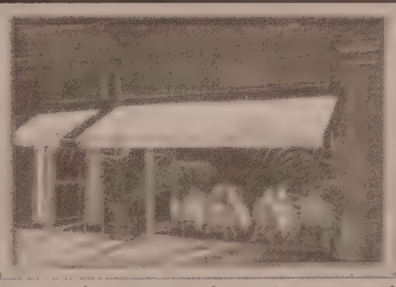

2 .Transfer mixture to a serving bowl, cover and chill overnight or up to 3 days ahead.

3. Toast pecans in a dry skillet and toss over medium heat until lightly browned. Chop coarsely. When ready to serve sprinkle the nuts over the compote.

On Thanksgiving Day a buffet dinner will be served from 1:30 to 6 p.m. at the Southampton Inn. The full menu will include a choice of favorite Thanksgiving appetizers, entrees and desserts. Tables of six or more will have their turkey carved tableside. The dinner is $24.95 for adults and $12.95 for children under 12 (plus tax and gratuities). Also at the Southampton Inn, on November 28th at 4 p.m., acclaimed author Ted Solotaroff of East Quogue reads from his just-released book "First Loves" (Seven Stories Press, 2003) by the fireside in the hotel's library. Admission is free and refreshments will be served. Then, on the following night (Saturday, November 29th) Southampton Inn Chef Steve Biscari-Amaral will prepare a Harvest Wine Dinner featuring six courses paired with the wines of the Wölffer Estate. For information call 283-6500.

Also for the Thanksgiving holiday, Villa Italian Specialties in East Hampton will offer a special catering menu. Orders are to be placed by 6 p.m. on Monday, November 24th and picked up by 6 p.m. on Wednesday, November 26th. For a Monday or Tuesday pick up, customers are asked to place orders at least 24 hours in advance. Some menu items include: ciliegine with pesto; hot stuffed peppers; gorgonzola salad; butternut squash puree; escarole with turkey meatballs; candied sweet potatoes; Villa sausage stuffing; giblet gravy; tiramisu; and local apple pie. For further info call 324-5110.

Peconic Bay Winery will hold their 2nd Annual Thanksgiving Barrel Tasting on Sunday, November 23rd from 2-6 p.m. on the Great Lawn just east of the winery in Cutchogue. They will be serving samples of the winery's 2002 Merlot, 2002 Cabernet Sauvignon, and 2002 Cabernet Franc. Dishes prepared by top Long Island and Manhattan chefs will be paired with award-winning Peconic Bay wines. Proceeds from the event will benefit a scholarship for a student of NYIT Culinary Arts Center in Central Islip. Tickets are $75 in advance and can be purchased via phone (631) 734-7361 or at www.peconicbaywinery.com.

Another Thanksgiving treat is the Thanksgiving Buffet Dinner at Tierra Mar on Thursday, November 27th from 1 to 6 p.m. The buffet includes an amuse bouche, a mesclun salad, a carving station with your choice of oven roasted turkey with gravy, honey glazed smoked ham, or charbroiled marinated leg of lamb. The buffet table will include a wide assortment of sides followed by a variety of desserts. The cost is $35 plus tax and gratuity and children under 10 are half price. For reservations call 288-2700.

George Martin (204-8700) in Southampton has announced a few new additions to their menu for the fall season. New appetizers include: cranberry barbecued Hudson Valley quail ($12); and New Mexican ahi tuna carpaccio with crisp tortillas ($12). Entrees include: Thai spiced bouillabaisse with lobster tail, mussels, clams and shrimp ($28); Colorado lamb duo with horseradish whipped parsnips and braised lamb shiitake and goat cheese ravioli with truffle scented bordelaise ($34); and sautéed veal Milanese napoleon ($22).

The Seafood Barge (765-3010) in Southold is also adding some new fall menu items. The new menu items include: Chesapeake style crab cakes ($12); pan roasted wild striped bass ($28); sunflower seed crusted rare Montauk tuna ($26), mesquite smoked porterhouse pork ($26); spicy duck pasta with udon noodles, crescent farm duck, sir fry vegetables, and garlic ginger sauce ($21); and for dessert warm apple brioche bread pudding ($8) and vanilla maple crème brulee with chocolate almond biscotti ($8).

OASIS Waterfront Restaurant and Bar will be offering promotions on its catering throughout the month of December for holiday events. For the remainder of November, OASIS will be open for brunch on Sunday 11:00-3 p.m. and dinner Friday, Saturday and Sunday at 5:30 p.m. A two course prix fixe is available all night Friday and Sunday and Saturday 5:30-6:30 p.m. The restaurant will close for the season December 1st, and will host their second annual End-of-Season party on Friday, November 28th, Saturday, November 29th and Sunday, November 30th featuring half price drinks at the bar and free bar appetizers. Letter from a catered Dinner Party in Amagansett:

Dear Mary Jane,

I can't rave enough about the outstanding catering job your restaurant did for me last Saturday. The food was absolutely delicious and the presentation was beautiful. The best dinner party I've ever given. The staff was so professional and well trained. They were on top of everything and anticipated every need.

My guests were so impressed and are still talking about it.

Thanks so much for your help and guidance. It was such a pleasant experience working with your staff.

Dining In The Hamptons

Pacific East

415 Main Street, Amagansett
631-267-7770

Pacific East is certainly 'way east' from where we live but 'pacific' was a total misnomer for the almost hurricane force winds which buffeted us as we rushed from the car into the warmth and comfort inside.

If you only know Pacific East in its summer mode you really are missing out because the blend of soft candlelight and imaginative décor transforms the ambience.

Michael Castino, the Executive Chef/Proprietor and his business partner Aram Sabat have built up an extremely well-deserved reputation in the last seven years and a quick glance at the menu as we drank a glass of a good Trinchero Napa-Santa Barbara Sauvignon Blanc and a Fontana Candida Pinot Grigio, confirmed that many of the dishes we enjoyed on previous visits were still there, together with others which just cried out to be sampled.

Michael bakes his own bread. Coupled with Thai Nam Prik, a great blend of roasted eggplant and tomato oil, immediately set our taste buds tingling.

We started our foray into a selection of appetizers with red curry steamed Prince Edward Island mussels with coconut and Thai herbs, which we both agreed, as we soaked up the residual broth with more of the bread, ranked as the best ever. Anyone who loves mussels should make a point of ordering this superb dish. Pacific East is known as a place where the sushi is always incredibly fresh. Again sushi lovers should make a beeline for Pacific East on Sundays when half price sushi is available. We enjoyed the Pacific East roll, an exotic blending of lobster, Osetra caviar and shiso, an aromatic green Japanese herb. Another decadent treat was Michael's wok seared Hudson Valley foie gras served over caramelized tart Granny Smith apples with the most intensely flavored pomegranate plum wine reduction. Unbidden, Dirk, our very attentive and professional waiter, brought a glass of Inniskillen Vidal ice wine, a true ice wine from Canada with excellent blend of full fruit flavors and residual acidity. This really was a heavenly match.

Fish is a very important part of Michael's menus and he is insistent that only the very best and freshest fish goes through the kitchen. As dedicated fish lovers we chose the Shanghai-roasted Chilean sea bass over warmed tomatoes vinaigrette with spiced potato crisps. The presentation, as with all of the dishes, was exquisite and made one almost regret having to destroy its visual appeal. However, good sense and olfactory appeal swiftly won and we were rewarded by fish perfectly cooked, with an accompaniment, which while being full of tastes and flavors, complemented and never swamped the fish's inherent delicacy.

For our other main course we decided to see how vegetarian visitors to Pacific East fare. Michael's vegetarian offering was grilled Portobello steaks with tamarind barbecue sauce and roasted beet mash. We also sampled a side of a creamed spinach flan. Well, if you carnivores have sometimes felt sorry for vegetarians because of what you fear they may be missing, all I can say is, don't be! At least, not for those fortunate enough to dine at Pacific East for this dish had such complexity of taste that we absolutely relished every morsel. The sauce, incidentally, is the same as used with the flank steak

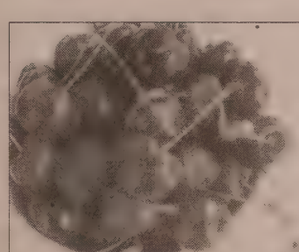

We had a chance for a lengthy chat with Michael as we finished up our dessert of a deliciously tart warm apple potpie with a large espresso coffee. He explained how he has always been fascinated by Asian cuisine and it was interesting to hear his enthusiasm as he described the way he goes about creating new dishes for the menu. Based on what he told us, diners here are going to continue to be intrigued and delighted by his creations.

Pacific East is a large, elegant restaurant that sets out to offer great food at great value and their daily offered prix fixe is the best example of this philosophy. A choice of six appetizers, seven main courses (including sushi, fish, steak, lamb shank and duck confit) and five desserts is available with most of the dishes coming from the main menu. At $19.95 this is truly a wonderful bargain.

Appetizers range from $6 to $19; Main courses from $15 to $31. Their wine list is compact, regularly reviewed and restocked and sensibly priced with many wines available from $29 to under $40 a bottle.

Pacific East offers extremely high quality food in an atmosphere suited to special occasions, whether an intimate dinner or a larger party or simply if you are passing and feel hungry. Michael Castino is a very talented chef and you will leave having enjoyed some exceptional dishes and looking forward to your next visit – as we certainly were, as we went back to the storms and tempests outside.

The Hamptons Diet?

Warning: Do not continue to read this week's column if you are even remotely hungry, because by the end of this piece there'll be a rumble in your tummy and a tingle in your taste buds.

Due to the overwhelming trend of food-derived beauty products on the market these days, I decided to come up with a tasty treat for you, my readers. What's more, you can indulge all you like and you won't gain a pound. So forget other diets – here is the "All-New" Hamptons diet – seven days to tickle your taste buds.

This week's menu:

Munch your way into Monday. Start your week off right, by taking a hot morning shower with Origins Pomegranate Wash, Bubbling body cleanser, $15. This fruity cleanser will fill your bathroom with the aroma of pomegranate, mixed with coconuts, strawberries, oranges and lemon zest. Yum.

Taste Tuesdays with a sweet tooth: You'll be sweetness and light all day if you wear Sugar Cookie Cologne by Demeter, $45 (bath products included in price). Note that Demeter also makes a Hot-Toddy cologne, $17.50, but perhaps this should be worn on weekends only. Bosses might wonder what you've got stashed in your desk drawer.

Wet your appetite on Wednesday with Philosophy's Gingerbread house, $35 (gift set). You'll taste good enough to eat with cookie lip balm, or sweetly smile with gingerbread facial paste – and, watch out J Lo – look inside the Gingerbread House. You, too, can have cinnamon buns with Philosophy's scented body wash.

Quench your thirst on Thursday and take a bite out of Juice Beauty's Green Apple Peel AHA Enzyme Treatment, $48. This product contains "real fruit juice" that has alpha hydroxy acids to improve the look and texture of your skin. We all know how healthy fruit is, so don't be surprised, the other nourishing benefits come from vitamins A, C and E. Say "goodbye" to fine lines and say "hello" to even-textured skin. It's yours for the picking.

By Friday, you've had your fill. So at the end of the workweek, relax and put up your feet for a light meal. As an appetizer, repair tired, dry, cracked skin on your tootsies with Barielle's Cucumber Foot Soother, $20. This low fat option moisturizes and soothes chapping, while chamomile leaves your feet feeling soft and smooth. Then for the main course, cook up Fresh's Rice foot cream, $32. This rice and beeswax product absorbs into the skin leaving it smooth and silky.It's officially the weekend and so on Saturday, veg-out with B Kamins chemist, Vegetable Skin Cleanser $32. Have a healthy snack after a night on the town and remove make-up with this veggie cleansing product that dissolves impurities from the face. Savor Sunday with an array of sinful treats. Chocoholics go wild with Philosophy's Chocolate Lovers Cookbook, $32 for set. Indulge with two kinds of chocolate shampoo and body washes, then swill them down with café au lait. Or pamper yourself with the mouthwatering Jaqua Girls marshmallow cocoa body whip, $16.50. You'll have smooth succulent skin to again begin the workweek.These seven gourmet days of heaven are a treat for everyone. Once you've tried it, you'll probably agree that it really was totally fat-free. You won't gain a pound – that I guarantee. So if our buffet of delectable bites has left you with an appetite, try the no calorie Hamptons diet. It's sure to satisfy.

Reduce Your Visible Age By 10 Years

"I felt I was looking tired and old. After seeing Dr. Covey and having Botox and Cosmoderm, I can't believe how much younger I look. Friends told me they almost didn't recognize me. No downtime, no discomfort, just wonderful results!"
Connie Esposito, Realestate Agent, Setauket, NY Age 52

"My friends and I can't believe the difference. With Botox and Collagen I had immediate results, I saw a dramatic difference with laser wrinkle treatment."
Vickie Darnell, former Actress and model, North Babylon, NY Age 49

"The laser wrinkle treatment was quick, painless and gave a youthful glow to my face. I also had laser hair removal over 2 years ago. For a woman to not have to shave, wax or tweeze is just a GIFT. Thank you."
Peggy Darling, Westhampton, NY

Fits To A Tee

When t-shirts first debuted, nearly 100 years ago, they were considered undergarments (think standard issue men's underwear). Thanks to James Dean and Marlon Brando, who boldly wore them with jeans, this clothing item went from undercover to out-in-the-open cool. Skipping ahead to present day, t-shirts have come into their own. We've hunted high and low to find the hottest, sassiest and best-fitting tees around.

We especially like Princess Charming's brilliantly cut and decidedly not boring t-shirts . Nicki Sanchez launched the company two years ago to fill a personal need. "I travel a lot and was always looking for fun, high quality t-shirts to wear." Being "underwhelmed" by what she saw in stores put her in the designer's seat and we couldn't be more pleased.

What makes Princess Charming so beguiling? For starters, the plucky sayings sprinkled across the front. Sanchez keeps things fresh by regularly introducing new phrases. "The current roster is up to 18," she says, noting personal favorites: We Want The Fairy Tale, Dirty Blonde (which Billy Baldwin purchased for wife Chynna Phillips), and Slightly Single. Unable to resist, we asked for clarification on the latter. "Kinda' looking," Sanchez explained.

To that we say "let the manhunt begin" but the search for a flattering, baby-soft tee with personality is over. Made in the U.S. from 100% combed cotton, Princess Charming t-shirts are designed for a woman's physique. The sayings, which are in color, often feature a clever icon, such as a knight on horseback with "We Want The Fairy Tale" or an apple core as depicted on "Hard Core." Available in medium (one size fits all) and small (for that tight, but not binding fit), the t-shirts, which are $28, may be ordered online at www.princesscharming.net.

Three tees from Princess Charming

Another pick to catch our roving eye and prancing fingertips is www.michaelstars.com. Known for cool basics, Michael Stars offers a varied and stylish selection (tanks, band crews, v-necks, Henley's and turtlenecks) that's great for any season. This hip, L.A.-based t-shirt boasts a distinct West Coast feel.

Regularly featured on television and in film, don't be surprised to see the tees on Alias, Charmed, Friends, Girlfriends and even in the much-talked about Kill Bill, to name a few. Good enough for Jennifer Garner is good enough indeed. But seriously, dress them up or down – these t-shirts are wardrobe staples and dovetail nicely with pants, jeans and skirts.

They are available in a variety of scrumptious colors and fabrics including 100% cotton, heather, pointelle, exclusive shine and retroversible. With over 150 styles to choose from (including selections for moms-to-be, kiddies and men), it's easy to mix and match colors, fabrics, and silhouettes. To order, log-on to the website and let your imagination run wild.

Registering ever-strongly on the trusty fashion radar is C&C California. These tees are addictive. And needless to say, we're hooked. The secret is their smooth, soft texture and slightly clinging fit that has us clamoring for more. They're reminiscent of vintage t-shirts, of which C&C designers, pals Cheyann Benedict and Claire Stansfield, are particularly fond.

Their quest for the perfect tee, one that would cover the bellybutton and a little beyond, led them to start the company and in some ways help ignite a fashion revolt against the all-too-bare midriff that on some is best left covered. Many, like myself, can't sing their praises loud enough.

These t-shirts are the ultimate layering piece. Like Princess Charming, the slightly longer silhouette of C&C tees works wonderfully with low-rise bottoms. There are many styles to choose from, including variations on the classic tee (short, 3/4, long, and bell sleeves) and tank along with colors like yellow snow, grape jelly, guacamole and freezie. C&C California tees are available at www.eluxury.com.

Suffice it is to say, whether your style is casual but chic, or city girl sleek, a great tee just can't be beat. They're perfect for work, play, home and holiday. Happy Shopping! –Aurrice Duke

HOMEGROWN WITH BRIAN HALWEIL

Backyard Sweetness

For Todd Bishop, planting a home orchard comes down to a basic philosophical question. Do you want perfect fruit?

"As beautiful as a perfect fruit looks, with all the sizes, shapes, and colors," Bishop says "at the end of the day, you see the larger picture." On the damp eastern end of Long Island, harvesting cosmetically perfect apples, pears, peaches or other fruit often requires spraying the trees with pesticides, and generally more than once each season. Bishop, an orchardist in Bridgehampton, has managed apple groves in New York State that adhered to a "full spray regime." He says, "I didn't like to get the stuff on me and the birds probably didn't like it either." He has eaten apples from such orchards and noted certain after effects in his own body. He just didn't feel right.

Farmers know that fussy customers often demand fruit that is without blemish. Many people will reject apples if they are russeted (covered with rough spots usually caused by harsh weather) or have flyspeck (small, slightly raised, black specks caused by a fungal disease), both conditions as harmless as the proverbial worm in the apple. "It's like the plague," Bishop laughs.

"I can see the beauty in an apple that's not perfect," Bishop says. "But striking a balance between spraying and production and cosmetics is a hard thing."

Fortunately, homeowners don't need to wrestle with this balance. "If you're looking for fruit for home consumption, it's much better to go for disease-resistant varieties," Bishop notes. Your backyard orchard may not be filled with the brand name fruit varieties that you see in the store, but there is a wide range of varieties that will reduce your need to worry about pests and diseases and yield some surprisingly delicious fruit.

In the realm of apples, Bishop lists Liberty (a tart variety), Priscilla (sweet), Pristine (yellow), and Enterprise and Goldrush (both good keepers) – all resistant to most common diseases. "Liberty apples in a pie are as good as it gets," Bishop says, describing the fruit's ultra-tart flavor that gets, he says, more complex if one leaves the fruit on the tree a bit longer than recommended.

Since 1991, Bishop has managed an orchard which stretches from Butter Lane to Mitchell Lane, north of Bridgehampton. When I spoke with him in the middle of September, he was preparing for Hurricane Isabel, picking as much ripe and near-ripe fruit as possible to hedge against losing it in the wind and rain.

In the middle of November, no fruit hangs in the orchard, and all but a few stubborn leaves have dropped. A mud-caked digging machine rests next to several rows of fruit trees teetering on burlap-wrapped rootballs. Occasional gaping holes are scattered throughout the orchard. On the East End, November is a great month for planting trees. Because the ground doesn't generally freeze in our area until after the New Year, if at all, trees can often be planted throughout the winter. (The anomalous and frigid winter of 2002 was an exception.)

For homeowners interested in planting a backyard orchard, Bishop sells mature trees – including apple, pear, peach, plum, and apricot. In season, he sells fruit from the orchard at his farmstand on Mitchell Lane. (People interested in trees should call 537-7072.)

Bishop says that pears and apples are easiest to grow, peaches are a bit harder, and apricots are the hardest. The apricot's early blossoms are really pretty, Bishop says, but also vulnerable to frost. He gets fruit off his apricot trees roughly every third year.

Bishop leads me through his orchard where he points out trees that he considers "dazzling like sculpture," and he describes the many advantages of edible landscaping. "Even if you have no fruit, you will have the flowering beauty each spring and the potential of a tree to grow more and more beautiful with time," Bishop says, waxing poetic. "Which is not the case with all things."

Other recommended sources of fruit trees include: Edible Landscaping (www.eat-it.com), a company in Virginia's Blue Ridge Mountains, which ships a wide range of fruit trees, berries, and other edible plants year round, including figs, quince, paw paw, artic banana, and kiwi vines; St. Lawrence Nurseries (www.sln.potsdam.ny.us) in Potsdam, New York, offers an incredible variety of heirloom and disease-resistant apple varieties, as well as other fruit and nut trees appropriate for our climate.

If the prospect of homegrown sweetness excites you, the basic requirements are sun and soil. Fruit trees do best in full sun. If you are interested in fruit production, you can plant trees as close as five to ten feet apart, and prune them heavily. For those interested in blossoms or a grand canopy, trees should be spaced fifteen, twenty or even thirty feet apart.

Gioia DiPaolo, a real estate agent with Corcoran Group in Sag Harbor, is one of Bishop's happy customers. DiPaolo planted ten apple trees at her Sag Harbor home in the fall of 2002, and she never anticipated "so many different challenges and surprises and discoveries." She has seen new species of birds in her yard since planting the trees, and deer nipped some of her buds. Although she didn't get much fruit this year, she got some "breath-taking" blossoms.

Bishop says that many of his customers plant a tree or whole orchard in remembrance of someone who has died. "They like it for their children," Bishop says. "It's great for them to see the budding, blossoming, fruiting – the whole process of life unfolding."

The Garden At Rock Cottage with Lance Brilliantine

The Dirt On Mulch/Compost

East Hampton gardeners are a fastidious breed. The per capita dollars spent on Hamptons landscaping is higher than almost anywhere else on earth. However, meticulous landscapes are often uninformed of the merits, and miss out on the value, of mulch and compost.

Mulch won't eliminate weeds in winter (in fact, using clippings risks sowing next season's weeds). Yet, gardens benefit significantly from the use of mulch and compost to over-winter plants and to enrich soil. This is especially true if a winter is expected to be cold.

Hamptons soil is mostly sand or clay with marginal topsoil. At Rock Cottage, a mulch/compost mixture has eliminated the cement-like sand leftover by installing a pool and relandscaping. A few years of applying a mulch/compost mixture have created a secure layer of topsoil in which plants thrive.

A mulch/compost mixture performs an important winter job: it regulates soil temperature, insulates plants, reduces water loss, and builds a baseline of humus that is the chief ingredient of quality topsoil. This mixture can even control some types of garden pests before they wreak spring havoc. There are other benefits. For example, we've discovered that applying a mixture of peat moss and coffee grinds around rhododendrons produces richer flower color, more abundant flowers, and darker green leaves.

There are a variety of mulches and composts available. Our experience suggests no single choice delivers the result we want.

We make our own compost from ground leaves, plant clippings, discarded vegetable parts, used coffee grinds, and cow manure. A compost accelerator can be used to hasten the composting process. While it requires some work – compost needs to be turned every month to aerate – it provides the essentials of topsoil and also supports soil-enriching critters like earthworms. Making compost during spring and summer provides an adequate supply for winter use. The East Hampton Recycling Center provides free compost, but we've steered clear from fear of the possible contents.

Common mulches available from nurseries and nursery suppliers include chips, shredded barks, cocoa hulls, and peat moss. We sometimes use salt hay as an overlay. The Agway Garden Center in Bridgehampton provides a wide selection, about a dozen types. Landscape fabrics are also available. These allow for the passage of water and stop spring weeds but need to be used in combination with a thin layer of organic matter to hold them down and improve their attractiveness.

Mulch alone is inadequate. For example, a four inch layer of peat moss provides great soil insulation but may prevent water penetration. It is likely to blow away in weeks. Pine chips look attractive, but reduce soil nutrients until they decompose. Used alone, cocoa shells tend to mold over and become unsightly.

Our rule for mixing mulch and compost is to ensure the combination insulates the ground, enables water penetration, and remains intact. We have found three parts mulch-to-one part compost is about right. Combining the two stabilizes the mixture and provides a better result. We heap the mixture over roses and they make it successfully through cold winters. Littering salt hay over the mixture provides added protection and even provides some shelter to protect wildlife (but it does look messy).

A mulch/compost mixture can even help combat some types of garden pests. Using a mixture that combines coarse, organic mulches such as the cocoa hulls helps discourage slugs and snails because their bodies are soft and scratch easily. Adding a thick layer of shredded bark to compost helps prevent over wintering pests like beetle grubs from finding food as they emerge from the soil in spring.

While we are not advocates of using black plastic, which is impenetrable as long as not torn, it can disrupt the life cycles of thrips, leaf miners, and other pests that lay their eggs. It needs to be used with an overlay of the mixture to look attractive. Unfortunately, plastic, while it traps moisture, can also suffocate the soil. We have found newspaper works the same as plastic, is inexpensive, but more temporary since it only lasts one winter. Newspaper is also biodegradable, though not attractive on its own. It needs to be combined with an overlay of the mixture to work effectively.

The mulch/compost mixture has made an enormous difference in our garden – one that is tolerable, to one where the green thumb reigns! Every East End garden can benefit from this added, caring step.

Police Blotter

A Montauk man called police on Friday to report two different crimes. He told police that about two months ago someone stole one of the license plates from a vehicle he had parked along side his Montauk Highway business. What drove him to contacting the police was when, sometime last week, someone ripped the hood ornament from the same car. All together the man and his unfortunate vehicle have suffered $128.50 in loss and damage. Police are investigating.

In an ironically similar, but unrelated case, a man involved in an East Hampton traffic stop on Newtown Lane found himself behind bars for the night. According to police, the man's Nissan Pathfinder was traveling on a "sub-standard," left, rear tire. Upon checking his registration and plate number, the officer discovered that the plate had been reported stolen almost a year ago to the New York City Police Department. After brief investigation, the officer also discovered that the man's proper registration had been suspended in early September of this year. He was arrested and charged with possession of stolen property and operating with a suspended registration.

Speaking of suspending, an East Hampton man's tree work will be put on hold until police recover his tree wheelbarrow. The man contacted police while he was working at an Osborne Lane residence. According to reports, he had parked his truck across the street but when he returned, the wheel barrow was missing. He told police that, due to the weight of the device, more than one suspect would've been involved in the heist. Police and the victim continue to search for the heist heisters.

A Westhampton man was having a little too much to drink last Thursday at a bar in Hampton Bays. Bar employees called police when the man became violent, reporting that he'd threatened to fight all the employees. The first officer to arrive found a man in the parking lot wearing no shirt, one shoe and a pair of blue jeans (not quite bar-attire in my opinion). Police offered to drive the man home, but he refused only to grow more violent and uncooperative. He was arrested on charges of disorderly conduct.

A LEG UP
Dear Dan,

I enjoyed reading your article from the October 24 paper, Free Pants. I was surprised to read at the end that the lucky pants were my husband's size! It is usually hard for him to find a pair that fit because he is very slim and only five foot seven. Out of curiosity I called the newspaper office about the pants. Your staff was so gracious, and even offered me some books you have written. The book Dan's Shorts included an endorsement on the back cover from Billy Joel. He wrote about the privilege of being in "Dan's Short's." Not being as famous as Billy Joel, my husband may never be in "Dan's Shorts," but he sure is comfortable in "Dan's Pants." Thank you for being so generous after your misadventure in shopping. Also, many thanks for signing the article to my aunt in Germany; who is your newest fan. We'll send her your prose on a regular basis.

MAIL FRAUD
Dear Dan,

I exercised my first amendment right and wrote Skip Heany expressing my concern over the Dunehampton issue. I was against it. I said things like: way of life, artist, teacher, little league coach, pillar of the community been here since the 70s, greater good...blah blah.

It must of been a pretty decent letter because I subsequently received six huge stacks of "lawyer paper" (article 68?) from the Dunehampton lawyer himself. Listing me among others in big threatening lawyer speak. He called too to further intimidate the —— out of us. I don't want to hire a lawyer but... Now the — —– and I use that term with love – has sent a courier to deliver a letter (lawyer thingy) that seems to threaten us with inclusion into a suit unless we give up the right to complain? Is this America? I guess I should go back to painting and leave letter writing to you. The only way I can think to fight this and not give in to the strong arm is use the press if they (YOU) think it is worthy. See you on the beach.

RISKY BUSINESS
Dear Dan,

I've read your paper with interest and I was wondering how one might go about seeking investors from your area for a film I wish to make. As your section of society has many contributors to the Arts, what are the odds of an unknown, but AWARD-WINNING filmmaker finding sympathetic investors? I have several scripts ready to go, some are feature-length and others are short subjects of a variety of subject matter, a couple being controversial for their subject matter rather than for any political agendas. If you wish to see a copy of my award-winning short, I will be more than happy to send it to you to view; that way you know something of what I'm capable of doing. I seek investors or "Angels" from an area such as yours because although the small town I live in has several artists and a small art gallery, it has never invested in filmmaking of any kind. I know how hard it is to find people willing to put up money on such a risky business as making a film, but it becomes a bit easier when you're in contact with people who HAVE taken such risks and know the potential to be gained when the project is finished.

ART APPRECIATION
Dear Dan,

Here's to you as publisher and Adam Smith as author of the fascinating article about Christo and Jeanne-Claude entitled Who's Here in the current issue of Dan's Papers.

As their lawyer beginning in 1979 on their application for permission to create and display in Central Park their work of art known as The Gates, I am pleased also to compliment Mayor Bloomberg for his wisdom in approving the application in 2003. It took only 24 years and a Mayor who appreciates art to get approval but, as the public will learn, the effort was worth the time.

This fabulous work of art will be viewed by millions in New York and seen via multi-media by many more millions throughout the world when the 7,560 Gates on 23 miles of concrete walkways in Central Park are unfurled, weather permitting, on the morning of Saturday, February 12, 2005.

The Gates is the 19th work of art for public viewing that Christo and Jeanne-Claude have created during their 40 plus years as collaborators on such works of art. Yes, as Adam Smith noted, their works of art for public viewing have made Christo and Jeanne-Claude the most internationally recognized artists in the world.

As he also observed, Christo and Jeanne-Claude will pay the full cost of The Gates, estimated at over $20 million. What has not been fully noticed as yet is that they have donated an exclusive, worldwide, royalty-free license empowering a not-for-profit foundation to use their intellectual property rights on products and events commemorating and memorializing The Gates. To benefit the City both aesthetically and financially, they have stipulated that all net proceeds the license generates must be used solely to nurture New York's nature, to create awareness of the importance of that goal to the health and well-being of the City's inhabitants and to support the arts for their power to advance that goal. Needless to say, they will receive none of the proceeds.

I am pleased to be the President and CEO of that foundation now incorporated, as a Public Private Alliance named to Nurture New York's Nature, Inc. You will hear much about us beginning on February 12, 2004, a year to the day before The Gates will be unfurled.

Sincerely,
Ted Kheel
Via e-mail

P.S. February was selected for the exhibition since there are no leaves on the tree at that time. The Artists will not receive any proceeds from the sale of products or the production of events. Nor have they ever previously received any proceeds or allowed any commercialization of the 18 works of art they have created for public viewing. They pay the entire cost of such works out of the sale of art created by the hand of Christo for private or museum exhibition.

Ted Kheel is Chairman of the Dan's Papers Advisory Board. –D.R.

The most treasured gift of the holiday season is the one we give ourselves. For during the precious few weeks between Thanksgiving and New Year's we oh-so-mercifully slow the pace. Sure there are hectic hours preparing and shopping, but we all know there will be special moments when, surrounded by the people who mean the most to us, we'll steal an instant to quietly reflect on our good fortune.

So as 2003 draws to a close it is the people who mean the most to Zizzi Contracting who are to be thanked. For without our families, our valued clients, my trusted staff, our numerous suppliers, and the community that supports us, there would be no blessings to count. Thank you all. May your holidays be filled with as many treasured gifts as time will allow — James V. Zizzi
